Hard-Liquor Inquiry Proposed In Senate

Scrugham Sees Adequate Stocks Held for Higher Profits, 'Cutting'

By Robert C. Albright

A resolution for investigation of the hard liquor situation was introduced in the Senate yesterday and drew a promptly enthusiastic response from the Senate cloakroom.

Senator James G. Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada, who dropped the resolution in the Senate hopper, told newsmen he wasn't kidding.

He said a personal investigation had convinced him there were adequate stocks of liquor, but they were being held for higher profits, and being cut with neutral spirits to the point where "it's a menace to health."

Unanimity Surprises Him

Scrugham told newsmen he talked it all over with some colleagues in the Senate cloakroom before introducing the resolution and was surprised at the unanimity of support.

Scrugham's indignation was reflected in other Senate quarters. One Senator, who asked his name not be used, said: "It's a damned outrage; you can't buy anything but a lot of rot-gut—that's all you can get and you have to pay $6 to $8 a quart for it."

The Nevadan's resolution called for a full investigation by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee of "the business practices and operations of the alcoholic industry in all its phases, including any matters relating to the production, importation, distribution, purchase, or sale of whiskey, gin, rum, brandy, or other distilled spirits, or wine or malt beverages."

Chairman Frederick Van Nuys of the Judiciary committee said he will attempt to call up the resolution at the next meeting and contemplated "a very thorough investigation of the whole business."

Many-faceted Inquiry

Among 24 proposed lines of inquiry, Van Nuys mentioned annual liquor profits and losses, formulas of the various brands and their volume of sale, production since repeal, identity of large distillery stockholders, sales to wholesalers and to monopoly States, prices by years of the various brands and grades, the extent to which neutral spirits are being used to pad out brand liquor, and the extent to which small distilleries and wineries are being bought up by larger companies, along with their inventories.

Van Nuys said the latter practice was threatening "dangerous control of supplies" and he considered this the focal point of the probe.

Scrugham told newsmen he was informed by Government sources that there are large quantities of good liquor in storage, but it is "being held for profit, a large profit.

"They (the liquor people) are contemptuous of OPA ceilings," said Scrugham. "This liquor scarcity question is largely a matter of mass psychology. They don't pue up prices right away. They have to create a knowledge of scarcity. That is what is being done in my opinion."

He said one purpose of his investigation will be to demonstrate the need for releasing a small amount of grain for producing a limited amount of liquor during the war, as a check against promiscuous bootlegging.

Green Assails WLB Stand On Labor Laws

Hints Withdrawal Of Union Support After Statements

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor last night issued a vigorous protest against statements by public and industry members of the War Labor Board indicating that more restrictive labor legislation may be necessary.

Hinting that organized labor might withdraw its support from the board, Green said:

"Statements such as these made by the War Labor Board make it increasingly difficult for labor to participate in the work of the WLB as now constituted and to maintain confidence in the board and a firm belief that the principles of equal and exact justice will be reflected in its opinions."

Three of the four public members—William H. Davis, George W. Taylor and Frank P. Graham—in an opinion of the coal wage decision stated that, "legislative sanction more thorough-going than now exist may be required unless organized labor demonstrates from now on its determination to accept the bitter with the sweet, and to comply with the orderly processes of government which have been set up to cope with wartime conditions."

The industry members followed this statement with a direct appeal to Congress for legislation to "require responsibility of unions and to provide additional protection for workers, employers, and the public against those who misuse the power presently permitted."

The three public members promptly replied to Green's assault, saying that they were referring "to the future, not the past," adding.

"Organized labor except for the United Mine Workers, has had an excellent record in its patriotic co-

Wilson Quits, Nelson May Absorb Job

WPB Chief Plans To Resume Active Direction of Output

By Ben W. Gilbert

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday prepared to resume active direction of the Nation's production program after accepting the resignation of WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson to permit him to return to the presidency of the General Electric Corp., it was stated by informed Government sources.

Nelson's acceptance of Wilson's resignation was not officially announced, but it was understood that an official announcement was in process of preparation.

A request from Wilson to be relieved of his Government job as of January 1 was pending on Nelson's desk when Nelson left on an inspection tour of war production in England and Russia early in October.

May Not Name Successor

It was said that Nelson decided on his return to accept the resignation and to absorb Wilson's job in his own office, rather than appoint a successor.

Meanwhile, informed sources revealed that a distinct possibility exists that Nelson may emerge as the man entrusted with the responsibility of steering the Nation's economy back to a peacetime basis at the end of the war.

Nelson, who left the executive vice presidency of Sears Roebuck & Co. in June, 1940, to become coordinator of purchases for the old National Defense Advisory Commission, was understood to have indicated a willingness to remain in Washington long enough to handle reconversion.

Whether he gets the job, however, was said to depend on clarification of his relations with Ber-

Allies Smash Railroad In Riviera

Nazi Supply Line Battered by U. S., RAF Bombers in Twin Assault

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—With a brilliant 48-hour burst of coordinated air power, Allied heavy bombers ranging thousands of miles from both British and Mediterranean bases closed a strangling grip today around the three most important supply funnels feeding the German armies embattled in Italy.

In a 1400-mile round-trip mission, RAF heavy bombers Thursday night crossed the whole of France to smash the coastal Riviera railway in the vicinity of the resort city of Cannes, and in the preceding daylight, Liberators of the new American Fifteenth Army Air Force operating from the south attacked the Antheor viaduct on the same rail artery, and also near Cannes.

British fighter command pilots went on the offensive against enemy transport in northern France and Brittany today in weather unsuitable for high-level attacks, the Air Ministry news service said. Typhoons and Spitfires hit 11 locomotives and damaged three tugs and nine barges on rivers and canals. One aircraft was reported missing from the day's sorties.

(The U. S. Federal Communications Commission reported that the Nazi-controlled Vichy network had gone off the air shortly before midnight tonight, indicating that Allied night raiders may be over France.)

The Liberators, whose attack was announced at Allied headquarters in Algiers, crossed the Alps to reach their target. A cluster of bombs fell across the railway and the adjacent highway, and both were believed to have been cut. Antheor is 15 miles west of Cannes.

Bearing Plant Bombed

These four-engined American bombers also bombed a ball bearing plant and the railway yards at Annecy, in the mountains of southern France, 30 miles below the Swiss frontier.

It was the second successive night that the big British bombers were out in force breaking up French bottlenecks for German supply trains. On Wednesday night, the RAF in the greatest force ever sent southward closed up the only other rail connection between France and Italy, sending tons of high explosives down in the entrance to the Mount Cenis Tunnel at Modane, France, which the Germans had only recently repaired after an RAF raid September 16.

Coupled wth these two crippling blows to German efforts to keep the Nazi armies in Italy supplied, was the Wednesday daylight Flying Fortress attack from Mediterranean airdromes on the railway junction of Bolzano just below the strategic

Allies Dominate Skies Over Russia, Europe and Pacific, Knox Says

Fort Knox Told War to Be Long

Fort Knox, Ky., Nov. 12 (AP).—In a statement issued today to be read by all officers, enlisted men and civilian employes at this home of the armored command, Col. N. Butler Briscoe, post commander of Fort Knox, said all their personal plans should be made on a long-range basis because "the war is not going to stop soon."

He said it must be remembered that "both of the nations with whom we are at war have had the populace thoroughly educated up to the present war and that the people have been incited to a fanatical fervor by promises and untruths."

Secretary Tells Of Abortive Jap Attack on Carrier

By John G. Norris

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox declared yesterday that the Allies have gained air domination in the active war theaters of the Pacific and Europe, including the skies over Russia and Germany.

He also disclosed that Japanese planes recently made four separate attacks on a large American aircraft carrier in the South Pacific, but that our fighter plane and anti-aircraft protective screen was so effective that "not a single shot got home."

A large percentage of the attacking planes was destroyed, Knox added.

In a review of the war situation, Knox said, the United Nations had developed a "telling mastery in the air, on the surface and under the surface of the seas."

Complete Domination

"There no question at all that we've achieved complete domination of the air over the Solomons and New Guinea, the Mediterranean, Britain, the English Channel, France and Germany," he added. "And the United Nations, as represented by Russia, recently gained air domination over the Russian front."

Allied warships, the Secretary went on, are "ranging the Mediterranean, the Pacific and the Atlantic seeking action, but finding few enemies to fight."

Knox said definitely that there had been no surface naval engagement in the Pacific since the night battle off Bougainville, November 2, as claimed by the Japs.

The Navy Chief told of the unsuccessful attack on the American carrier briefly in commenting on elaborate claims being made by Tokyo that the Jap forces had won great victories over American naval forces in the South Pacific.

Branding these claims as "cockeyed" and "completely false," Knox said flatly that all American naval losses have been announced. There have been none in the South Pacific in the past few weeks.

"Incredible Campaigns"

The Secretary had before him the texts of recent Japanese broadcasts, reporting big surface battles between the Nipponese and American fleets in the Solomons area in which it was claimed that 130 of our ships were lost

"The Japs have launched a most incredible campaign apparently designated to convince their people that they have won a major victory," he told reporters. "We can only guess that they have some psychological situation at home which we don't know about and which is forcing them to try to fool their own people."

Reading extracts from a broadcast "reporting" how Japanese planes broke through the protective screen guarding our aircraft carriers and sank some of them, Knox said this claim was particularly interesting.

"The outstanding factor in the recent action in the Solomons is that the Japs have not been able to get through our fighter and anti-aircraft screen," he added. "Instead of getting through, they didn't even make a dent in it."

"Ridiculous" Claim

For security reasons, Knox added, he couldn't give details of the four recent attacks on one of our carriers, but said he hoped to release the story soon.

Commenting on a Jap claim that Admiral Halsey, Allied commander in the South Pacific, had been

Army 'Jolts' War Optimists

Army Intelligence, firing a set of figures at optimism, said yesterday that Germany and Japan are still so strong, so well stocked and situated, that if we take things too easy "we may find that our opportunity for victory" has vanished.

In fact, said Gen. George V. Strong, acting chief of the Military Intelligence Division, in a report released on Capitol Hill, the Germans are stronger now than in 1939 and the real fight against the Japanese is only starting.

Strong's review, stacking up point by point the things still blocking the roads to Berlin and Tokyo, previously had been given to House members in secret session.

Reds Thwart Nazi Effort To Flee Crimea

Flotilla Destroyed; Russians 15 Miles From Vital Rail Link

London (Saturday), Nov. 13 (AP). The Russians threw their cavalry into their semicircular offensive from Kiev yesterday, reaching to within 15 miles of the rail junction of Zhitomir and capturing 100 towns as they steadily pushed the Nazis nearer to the prewar Polish border, Moscow said today.

The early morning communique, broadcast by Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said cavalry was used to by-pass and surprise the Germans as the Russians captured Korostyshev on the main road from captured Kiev to the rail junction objective of Zhitomir. Twenty-four guns, 300 trucks and other war supplies were taken, along with prisoners.

Soviet troops, fighting northeast of Kerch, in an assault on the blockaded Crimea, smashed a Nazi flotilla trying to evacuate the beaten Germans and sent them to their death by drowning. On land, 1500 German bodies were left strewn on the battlefield and many prisoners were taken, the bulletin said. The Russians have landed north and south of the city.

1000 Nazis Slain

South of Rechitsa, where the Russians in the central front were pushing into the Pripet Marshes, to try to shut the door on Nazis defending Gomel, the Red army killed 1000 more Nazis. In one Rechitsa sector, the war bulletin said, the Russians destroyed 15 Nazi tanks, 38 field guns, 11 mortars and other equipment.

In the Zhitomir thrust the Russians were only 75 miles from the prewar Polish border.

Enemy Vainly Counterattacks Again in Italy

Clark's Americans Smash Ahead in Wintry Weather

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Nov. 12 (AP).—Aided by a cold rain in the lower areas and by snow in the Apennine Mountains, German troops are counter-attacking fiercely and continuously in an effort to regain strategic heights won by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army fighters near Mignano on the enemy's strongly fortified "winter line" across Italy.

Every Nazi thrust has been thrown back with losses in killed and captured, Allied headquarters reported today, and Clark's Americans have pushed on amid the frightful weather conditions to seize one more commanding feature on the slopes of Mount Camino near Mignano.

This, however, was the only Allied gain reported from yesterday's fighting, which consisted mainly of clashes between rival patrols the length of the 90-mile front. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army exchanged artillery fire with the enemy across the Sangro River near the Adriatic, but for the first time in weeks reported no advances. Enemy mines and demolitions continued to plague the Allies.

Nazis Claim Gains

(A German communique claimed that a powerful counterattack had driven Clark's troops from a hill position south of Mignano. "American troops west of the Volturno, despite heavy losses, are continuing for days their unsuccessful attacks on our hill positions," the communique added.)

The Nazis, for all the fury of their present thrusts, displayed continued signs that they expected to be forced back on Rome soon. Aerial reconnaissance showed they had blown up oil reserves at the west coast port of Gaeta, 9 miles behind their line, and that they had sunk two more ships in Leghorn Harbor in an effort to block its northern entrance.

It was felt here that the German decision to destroy Leghorn's sea facilities was inspired at least partly by the fact that the port though nearly 250 miles from the present ground fighting, is only 57 miles from the island of Corsica. At that short range, Allied fighters easily could cover naval forces if

Enemy Loses 88 Planes As Halsey Raids Rabaul

Carrier Force Scores Smashing Success; Our Vessels Suffer Only Minor Damage

By William F. Boni.

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Saturday), Nov. 13 (AP).—Navy planes from aircraft carriers and land-based bombers—a raiding force of more than 200—sank three Japanese warships and damaged 12 others at Rabaul Thursday while the enemy expended 64 planes in four frantic but unsuccessful attempts to sink the carriers.

A Japanese cruiser and two destroyers were sent to the bottom of Rabaul's harbor, a cruiser and 11 destroyers were damaged and 24 Japanese interceptors were shot out of the sky during a massive assault which opened Wednesday night and extended into Thursday's daylight hours.

Then, as the naval task force was withdrawing, the Japanese made their supreme efforts to deliver mortal blows. Their medium bombers and torpedo planes were so consistently cut down by anti-aircraft of the ships and covering Allied planes that none of the planes in the first three waves scored a single direct hit on the vessels, headquarters said, and the fourth wave never even reached their target.

Light Damage to U. S. Ships

General MacArthur's spokesman said light damage was sustained by some warships but the seaworthiness of none was impaired. There were minor casualties among the personnel.

The heavy smash at the key stronghold on which Japan's tottering South Pacific position hinges was the work of the air force of Admiral William F. Halsey.

Dauntless dive-bombers, Avenger torpedo bombers and land-based Liberators loosed the new devastation on Rabaul, protected by Hellcat fighters from the carriers.

Land-based fighters covered the aircraft carriers and their escorting ships. In all the actions, 17 Allied planes were lost against the Japanese plane toll of 88. Some of the Allied pilots were saved.

Aerial photos were taken prior to the new raid—the latest in a series which have dealt crushing blows, particularly among the cruisers, at Rabaul—showed 23 Japanese warships in Rabaul's harbor or just outside in Blanche Bay.

Jap Strength Sapped

(Many such warships had been seen recently moving the 800 miles from Truk to replace others sunk and damaged.)

Reconnaissance on Friday showed the number of warships at Rabaul had been reduced to eight. There was a possibility that some might have been withdrawn to the Kavieng, New Ireland, area above

Nazi Planes Sink Destroyer Beatty In Mediterranean

Loss of the destroyer Beatty in the Mediterranean as a result of aerial bombing was announced yesterday by the Navy.

The 1700-ton Beatty went down November 6, but no details were given about the attack by German planes.

The sinking brings to 12 the number of naval vessels lost in the Mediterranean and to 129 all American naval losses since the war started. The Beatty was the fourth destroyer announced as lost this week. Ships of her size normally carry 175 men.

Communique No. 482 said:

"Mediterranean:

"1 The Destroyer U. S. Beatty was sunk in the Mediterranean on November 6, 1943, as a result of enemy aircraft action. The next of kin of the casualties aboard the Beatty have been notified."

Lieut. Comdr. William Outerson of Hollywood, Calif., skipper of the Beatty, was listed among the survivors.

Rabies Attacks Md. Livestock; Dogs Bite Six More in D. C.

A rabies-infected horse bit two persons in Montgomery County and a cow was found to have been infected with the disease, it was learned yesterday, as six persons, four of whom were children, were bitten by dogs in Washington, police reported.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, said this was the first instance in which livestock had contracted the disease in the current epidemic. The horse was bitten recently by a dog, the owner said. The animal was part of a delivery team in the western suburban area and has been destroyed.

In Montgomery County 26 rabid dogs and two cats have been killed. In the District there have been 84 rabid dogs discovered and a total of 174 dogs were destroyed at the pound between November 2 and November 6.

De Gaulle Acts Quickly

Catroux Given Peacemaker Role in Lebanese Rioting

By Richard G. Massock

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—The French Committee of National Liberation, headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, announced tonight a few hours after the British government urged it to smooth the strife in Lebanon, that it was sending Gen. Georges Catroux, commissioner of state, to Beirut with full power to settle the situation.

Disturbances already were flaring in the streets of Beirut, capitol of Lebanon, a Beirut dispatch reported, saying that French tanks and armored cars appeared this morning when angry mobs demonstrated against the arrest of the Lebanese President, Premier, several cabinet members and virtually the entire Parliament—the immediate spark of the crisis.

The dispatch said French armed forces opened fire on the mobs with machine guns, killing several civilians, and that a grenade was hurled at a tank, which burnt out.

The committee's announcement of Catroux's departure, issued in Algiers, was the first official recognition there of the troubled Lebanese situation.

President Roosevelt's arbitration of the dispute over the little eastern Mediterranean republic's attempt to attain full sovereignty independent of the French mandate was proposed today by the British-owned Cairo newspaper, Bourse Egyptienne.

Following its protest against the French action, taken without British knowledge, the London government instructed Sir Harold Alfred MacMillan, British commander in chief in Palestine, to pursue the matter with the French Committee of National Liberation.

The French delegation in Cairo, making the first official French statement on the situation, published a communique tonight explaining the French attitude at length and closing with the assertion that "under the influence of elements who are not interested in Lebanon's independence and who are more anxious to push France out of those regions, the Lebanese government, in spite of its international obligations and deciding to act by force, put a "fait accompli' before the French National Committee."

The statement went on to say that the committee "of its own free will would have given Lebanon its constitutional independence," and concluded:

"The French could not accept this hostile act. France, however, intends to fulfill as soon as possible the mission with which she is entrusted by leading Lebanon to complete independence."

Many Christian and Moslem leaders appealed to Sir Edward Spears, British Minister to Lebanon, with warnings that unless British authorities took some action to settle the crisis there would be bloodshed.

In the capital city of Beirut itself street crowds swarming into the main square brought traffic to a standstill, although there has been no further report of rioting since that yesterday in which several casualties occurred with one

New Remedy for Seasickness Guarded as Military Secret

Ottawa, Nov. 12 (INS).—The Royal Canadian Navy tonight announced discovery of a remedy for seasickness.

For the duration, the formula will remain a secret because of its military value.

The remedy has been tested on land and in every conceivable type of weather at sea. It eliminates seasickness in three out of every four normally susceptible persons.

It is taken in the form of a pink capsule, one to two hours before sailing, or in rough weather, and is effective for eight hours.

Additional capsules may be taken every eight hours for two days, by which time most persons will have found their sea-legs. However, if the subject still suffers, the process may be repeated indefinitely. The capsule, as effective in curing seasickness as preventing it, produces no harmful effects.

The discovery is the result of long research underwritten by the Royal Navy, and involves scientists like the late Sir Frederick Banting and Surgeon Capt. C. H. Best, co-discoverers of insulin.

The prevention of seasickness—which science has found affects four out of ten persons—"has an immediate bearing on military operations," the statement said.

"It means that troops can be landed from invasion barges in good physical condition and ready for intense fighting."

Preliminary indications are the remedy is equally effective against airsickness—of particular importance to airborne troops.

The capsule is being manufactured in quantity and shortly will be issued to ships for general use at sea. It is not expected to become available for civilian use until after the war.

Discovery of the remedy climaxed investigations begun under Royal Naval auspices early in 1941. After careful land trials with the help of many ingenious motion-pro-

Grim Battle On

Germans Gain Foothold on Leros Island

Cairo, Nov. 12 (AP).—Hundreds of Germans were killed securing beachheads in a Nazi invasion of the British-held Aegean island of Leros today, as British and pro-Allied Italians fought side by side in a grim battle to throw the invaders back into the sea.

An Allied communique said a number of German landing craft, each believed to carry about 100 soldiers, were sunk by the defenders and many others damaged as several of the landing attempts were fought off.

Other German landing parties were more successful, however, succeeding in setting foot on the island, principally in the northeastern corner at Pasta di Sotto and Appetici. The Allied communique added that these detachments "are being dealt with." Other landings, it was reported, were made in the east and southeast.

"Firm Foothold" Claimed

(The German DNB agency said in a broadcast that German troops had gained a "firm foothold" on Leros. The Germans also claimed the sinking of a British destroyer and "several minor enemy naval units" off the island yesterday.)

The island's defenders found their task increasingly difficult through the day, after the early morning landings, as the Germans threw in waves of dive-bombers against them. The British were without fighter protection, for there is no airfield on Leros and none on any Allied possession near enough to do any good.

It was the second German attack against the island in eight days. Landing attempts were successfully repulsed last November 4 and 5.

Leros, together with the Greek island of Samos, are the only two islands left of four which came into Allied possession after the Italian capitulation. The British were forced by the Germans to evacuate Cos and Symi in the Dodecanese group.

(The Turkish radio, meanwhile, reported from southern Turkey that continuous firing could be heard from the direction of the German-occupied Dodecanese Island of Rhodes. The broadcast, recorded by Reuter, said it was believed that Rhodes was being bombarded by the Allies.)

The German attacks apparently were based on Calinos, an island between Leros and the German-occupied island of Cos. British planes reported bombing a concentration of German landing barges near this island yesterday.

Italians Oust Roatta, Called War Criminal

Algiers, Nov. 12 (AP).—Gen. Mario Roatta, chief of staff of the Italian army, whom the Yugoslavs have charged with being a war criminal, has been removed from his post, it was announced officially today.

The Yugoslav government-in-exile charged that Gen. Roatta was responsible for a reign of terror during the Italian occupation of Yugoslavia, and asked the Allies to have Marshal Badoglio dismiss him.

The charges against Roatta may be the first presented before the United Nations Commission to be set up in London, where a decision probably will be reached whether he will be sent to Yugoslavia for trial under the terms of the Moscow conference.

(In announcing the Allied request for Roatta's removal Wednesday, British Minister of State Richard W. Law also told Commons in London that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower still had under consideration "the case of Gen. (Vittorio) Ambrosio, another of Premier Pietro Badoglio's chiefs of staff whom the Yugoslavs have charged with war crimes.)

the Allies chose to attack Leghorn.

There was widespread Allied air activity over the front and behind the lines in Italy. American Spitfires shot down two enemy fighters and British Spitfires destroyed a Nazi observation plane. Four Allied craft were missing from all operations.

American invaders exploded an ammunition dump, strafed a locomotive and destroyed four trucks near Cassino. RAF Bostons and Baltimores blew up a chemical works at Bussi near Popoli and attacked a railway station and a road bridge.

Premier Appeals To Populace to Stop Anti-Axis Activities

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—A state of near chaos in the Carpatho-Ukraine, easternmost province of Hungary and formerly the southeastern tip of Czechoslovakia, was reported today by the Czech government in London as Premier Nicholas Kallay of Hungary fervently appealed to his countrymen for suppression of anti-Axis outbreaks.

The guerillas, many of whom were brilliantly led by one-time Hungarian officers, were making widespread raids throughout the Carpatho-Ukraine and the entire area was fermenting, with hundreds of arrests made, Czech accounts said, even though Russian armies which might eventually aid them were still more than 300 miles away.

Calling on the Hungarians for order while the "military forces of Germany, Russia and the Anglo-Saxon powers are deployed around us," Kallay emphasized the necessity for militry preparedness and declared the Hungarian army would defend the country's borders.

No Reference to Nazi Link

In his address opening Parliament quoted by the Budapest radio, Kallay made no reference to the link with Germany, but curiously declared "we must not gamble away our chance of voicing our demands when the complicated problems of Central Europe should come to be disentangled."

Heightened attrition against German communication lines in the Balkans was reported in the communique by Yugoslav Partisan leader Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) which told of the destruction of a bridge over the River Drina near Zvornik in central Bosnia. The communique also told of extensive operations over 1000 square miles of five Yugoslav districts from the heart of Yugoslavia to the southern frontier.

The communique indicated that one of the most powerful series of operations since the Yugoslavs rose in organized opposition was under way in Macedonia, Dalmatia, Montenegro, Hercegovina and eastern Bosnia.

Civil Strife Still Rages

Civil war was still in progress, the Partisan communique indicated, reporting heavy fighting in Serbia against the Nazis, pro-Nazi Chetniks and the forces of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, who is a member of the Free Yugoslav government in Cairo.

The Germans admitted some large-scale operations in the northwest Balkans in what they called "mopping up operations." The Nazis said guerilla resistance was broken in the Majevica mountains in eastern Bosnia and a town given as Graznica seized.

The Partisans reported heavy fighting with Bulgarian troops near Uzice in west Serbia with 60 Bulgarians killed and one of their columns destroyed.

A German column on the western Bosnian border was attacked and 56 Germans killed, 25 captured, the communique said.

War Sidelights

Catacombs Death Trap To Nazis

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 12 (AP).—An underground in the true sense of the word, whose members dart from Rome's gloomy Catacombs to assassinate and kidnap the German invaders, was described today by eyewitnesses recently returned from the Italian capital.

Interviewed by the Tribune de Lausanne, the travelers said Nazi authorities were doing their utmost to run down the patriots who strike swiftly in the darkness and then disappear into the endless labyrinth.

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—Admiral Sir John Cronyn Tovey, who conducted the chase and sinking of the German battleship Bismarck, has been promoted to admiral of the fleet to fill a vacancy created by the death on October 21 of Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, the Admiralty announced tonight. Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham succeeded the late Sir Dudley as first sea lord.

Red Gains Alarm Rumania

Istanbul, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Russian advance toward Rumania has stirred panic in that country, especially in Bessarabia, the province wrested from Russia in 1941, a Budapest dispatch to the newspaper Aksham said today.

(The Russians are about 100 miles from Bessarabia in the south and 160 miles away in the Zhitomir area farther north.)

Chinese Pierce Jap Defenses Near Ichang

Chungking, Nov. 12 (AP).—Chinese troops have broken into the enemy defense ring around Ichang—farthest point of Japanese penetration in central China—in a counteroffensive against the Japanese driving through the "rice bowl" between the Yangtze River and Tungting Lake, the China High Command announced tonight.

The action around Ichang was said to have been carried out in the face of heavy gunfire, and it was announced that the Chinese took more than 10 strategic points, inflicted heavy casualties and captured considerable supplies. Before the counteroffensive the Chinese had fallen back for 12 days according to plan before 30,000 attacking Japanese.

The Chinese also were declared to have held the invaders at bay south of Itu, a Yangtze port 25 miles below Ichang. In the mountains south of the Yangtze, which the Japanese had penetrated in their westward sweep, the Chinese killed a large number of invaders and are rounding up the trapped remnants.

Chinese troops also were attacking in Hunan, Hupeh and Kiangsi provinces, named in order from west to east, on both sides of the Yangtze.

The Chinese also said they reached points near Japanese strongholds northwest of Sokow.

Mosquitoes Raid Berlin

In addition to these major heavy operations, the British bomber command last night once more sent 400-mph Mosquitoes over Berlin—the first time since October 18—and others attacked Hanover and objectives in the industrial Ruhr Valley.

From all these operations seven RAF bombers were missing, giving the RAF a total loss for the month to date of 26 bombers in three major assaults. All of the Liberators returned safely to their Mediterranean bases from the raid on the Cannes area, which they made unescorted.

In moonlight so brilliant the crews could pick out roads, fields and railways all across France, making navigation only a matter of map reading, the RAF bombers sent a great concentration of explosives showering on the glistening rails of the Riviera France-Italy line. A communique said the line was attacked at several points, the main blow being at the railway center at Cannes, with bombing "heavy and well concentrated."

One or Two Fighters

Returning crews said that only slight opposition was encountered from coastal defenses and from one or two fighters seen over Cannes.

The fact that a plant producing ball bearings again was a target for the Americans was new indication of the intensive drive against factories throughout Nazidom producing this vital part of war machinery.

The Fifteenth Air Force itself has twice bombed a bearing factory at Villar Perosa near Turin, and the British-based United States Eighth Air Force delivered two devastating blows on the Nazis' great bearing works at Schweinfurt, Germany.

The night RAF attack on the Riviera followed by only a few hours the American, British-based heavy raid on the Westphalian city of Muenster on Armistice Day, the second attack on that inner German rail center in seven days.

Father Rookie, Son Veteran At Induction

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—A draft board has ordered the senior and junior James Edward Deans to report for induction today—and in things military, the father is a rookie and the son a veteran.

James Edward, jr., who is 18, has an honorable discharge from the Army and more than 1000 hours' flying time as a tail gunner in a Flying Fortress. He was honorably discharged from the Army last summer because he was under age, having enlisted when he was 16.

James Edward, sr., who is 37, is the father of two other children, Ronald, 8, and Jackie, 7. The son wants to get into the Navy as a flying cadet; his father has not made known his preference.

Couldn't Win

Nazi Air Unit Lost All Craft Three Times

Algiers, Nov. 12 (AP).—On three different occasions in the past four months, all planes of one German fighter squadron were either destroyed or made unserviceable, intelligence officers of the Northwest African Air Forces learned today.

The squadron, flying Focke-Wulf 190s, was stationed at Castelvetrano airfield in western Sicily, from where it raided the Allied-held island of Pantelleria until heavy raids on the base compelled a move first to Gerbini, and then to Vibo Valentia on the toe of Italy.

One day American Flying Fortresses blasted the Vibo Valentia field with thousands of fragmentation bombs and every plane in the squadron was left unserviceable.

A few days later the Nazi pilots were flown to Bari to get new planes, but arrived to find the bombers had visited there, too, and the new planes were wrecked.

The pilots then were taken to another airfield, where they were given new Focke-Wulf 190s especially flown from Munich.

The squadron shortly shifted to a new base.

But the ever-present Fortresses showed up on the same day as the squadron. Once again deadly fragmentation bombs knocked out every German fighter down to the last one.

The squadron's unhappy history was pieced together from examination of the captured airfields and information from other sources.

or two French officers believed killed.

In Jerusalem the all-Palestine conference of the Arab Chamber of Commerce called a nation-wide general strike for tomorrow.

The extent of the British demarche was not disclosed, but it may have suggested the release of the arrested Lebanese leaders who had sought to modify the republic's constitution to make it, in their view more compatible with Lebanese sovereignty.

Sir Harold was instructed to inform the French authorities that Britain adheres firmly to its declaration supporting the assurances of independence given to Lebanon on June 8, 1941, and will permit no disorders in an area of vital strategic importance.

Cairo dispatches reported that French Commissioner Jean Helleu had ordered new elections in Lebanon on the ground that the previous government had been elected "under pressure" and was not representative of the country, and had asked Emil Edde to form a new government.

The London Evening News summed up the situation this way today:

"De Gaulle's statesmanship, now that he is the political head of the French committee, is on trial in Lebanon."

a direct assault on Zhitomir. They crossed the Teterev River yesterday and captured Radomysl, 8 miles farther up the river from Korosty shev.

The Russians were making steady progress toward Korosten, another rail junction northwest of Kiev, taking the town of Lyakhovaya, 33 miles to the southeast. But progress was more favorable toward Zhitomir because the Red army was already across the river.

Zhitomir, founded in 1240, had a normal population of 75,000 people and was an important grain center of the Ukraine.

Germans and Rumanians were consolidated in the hills around Kerch and pouring heavy fire into Russian ranks but the Soviet artillery gradually was silencing them. Both sides were using strong airforces but Russian fliers held the initiative.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin radio commentator, said the Russians were stubbornly fighting for a large-scale breakthrough in the Ukraine as the Russians drove massed infantry and tank forces alternately west and south of Kiev against the German line.

The Ukrainian battle was a fight for communications, with the major target the Leningrad-Odessa railway. When this is cut, the entire German system will be crippled although they still have numerous ways out of Russia and ample routes for defense and withdrawal.

In the Vitebsk area, where the Russians were driving a flanking wedge west of the town from Nevel, the Germans admitted wihtdrawing to "shortened" positions south of the main highway between Smolensk and Vitebsk.

Marines Imitate An Army of 20,000

Paratroopers Led by D. C. Man 'Cover' Successful Bougainville Landing

Led by Lieut. Col. Victor Krulak, 30, of 5101 Tilden st. nw., a battalion of Marine paratroopers hoaxed the garrison of Jap marines on Choiseul Island into believing they were an army of 20,000 and thus enabled the main force of Yanks to land successfully at Bougainville.

KRULAK

Slipping safely onto the island on October 27 the few hundred Marines departed on November 3, leaving behind them 143 dead Japs, a razed town and a thoroughly puzzled garrison of the enemy.

As the result of his part in the exploit Colonel Krulak, who is a former coxswain and captain of the Naval Academy crew, has been presented the Navy Cross. He is only 5 feet 5 inches tall, and weighs 130 pounds.

Colonel Krulak said that his tiny "army" was actually the 20,000 man force reported from Tokyo as having landed.

In the bag of tricks which the Marines broke out to harass a wily foe were isolated attacks, maneuvers, and being thoroughly elusive.

The Americans reported nine killed and 16 wounded. Colonel Krulak was among the wounded, having received superficial wounds in the arm and cheek when hit by an explosive bullet.

"The Jap marines are supposed to be pretty hot," the colonel said, "I had always thought the Japs stayed and fought to the finish, but it was enlightening to me to see them break and run in the most un-samurai fashion. And when they ran they weren't just crawling—they went at high gear, so fast that we only hit a few of them on the run."

He said they had been bombed a few times by Jap planes but this was ineffectual.

Colonel Krulak's wife and three young sons live at the Washington address while his parents live in Denver, Colo. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934.

The citation accompanying his award said that although wounded he refused to relinquish his command and continued to lead his Marines with skill and determination against a superior force.

Close Shave for Japs

Guadalcanal, Nov. 12 (AP).—A battalion of marines and that perennial puzzle—what to do with old razor blades—got together in the swamp jungles of Choiseul Island in the northern Solomons.

The solution turned out to be typically marinish—they used the pesky things to kill japs.

"It sounds kind of inhuman," said Lieut. Col. Victor Krulak, Washington, D. C., commander of the Marine Parachute Battalion, "and I suppose the Japs will hate me for it. But they had the annoying habit of whizzing up these jungle trees like monkeys whenever opposed, and then turning into snipers.

"So we went along the trails, pretending to be Jap patrols looking for good climbing trees. In the bark of these trees, we stuck a lot of razor blades fairly high up.

"Then when the Japs came up these trails, we opposed them and they would run up the trees about 10 feet, then drop suddenly and look as they were looking at their feet someone would shoot them."

Rabaul, but in any event Rabaul's effectiveness as a base against the Allied offensive in the northern Solomons has been impaired seriously.

Reconnaissance also brought out that Japanese aircraft strength, which was approaching 300 before this latest assault, had been considerably reduced the following day.

In a special statement, General MacArthur's spokesman said the "greater part of the Japanese air effort now apparently is being used to support the situation on his Wewak-Rabaul front."

Wewak is on northeastern New Guinea, approximately 300 miles up the coast from the Huon Peninsula where General MacArthur's ground forces hold positions only 70 miles away from the west tip of New Britain. Rabaul is on New Britain's northeastern tip.

There was no change in the situation on Bougainville where Marines and Army troops have secured a firm beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay, 260 miles southeast of Rabaul. Japanese positions near the beachhead took an aerial pounding and Allied planes continued to render Bougainville's airfields inoperative.

The new raid on Rabaul was significant for the increasing use by the Allies of aircraft carriers in that sector.

On November 5, Navy planes taking off from carriers joined with Army land-based planes of General MacArthur in sinking a heavy cruiser, damaging five heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and two destroyers at Rabaul.

GOP Complainers Shocked at Rare Saturday Session

By the Associated Press

A Republican bloc that has been complaining of too many recesses and too much inaction got a surprise from the Democratic leadership yesterday as a rare Saturday session of the House was ordered, although there was no business on the legislative program.

Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts nonchalantly announced there would be a session today. Normally, Saturday sessions are held only when urgent legislative business is pending.

Members of the Republican-"drive - for - action committee" promptly called a meeting and arranged for a series of speeches to fill out the Saturday program.

"We announced when we organized last week that we would object to recesses during the week until the Democratic leadership decided to let us vote on important unpassed legislation," Representative Mundt (Republican) of South Dakota told reporters. "We did not object to the customary recess on Saturdays or holidays."

Lehman Sees U. S. Sacrificing Cheerfully for World Relief

By Christine Sadler

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 12.—Although the United States will have to furnish a substantial part of materials needed by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, probably "considerably more than 20 per cent"—the amount of sacrifice involved for its citizens will be relatively small, Herbert H. Lehman declared today in the first press conference after his selection as director-general of the new international agency.

"I am confident the sacrifice necessary will be willingly and cheerfully made by them," he asserted.

As long as the war continues, either in Europe or the Far East, relief needs of liberated countries should be kept to a secondary role, Col. John J. Llewellin, new minister of food for Britain, declared tonight at a meeting of the UNRRA council.

"The first priority is to finish and to win the war," he said, expressing belief relief must not be extended to the first freed countries on "such a scale as to prevent the speedy liberation of all."

Three other beliefs were expressed by the British member of the council as follows:

1. A complete pooling of resources is necessary for the UNRRA job. Especially, he said, must there "be a real pooling of ships"—without which he declared goods will not get to some who badly need them, and others with money to bid will "crash in and buy without reference to the common good."

2. The supply machine set up in this country, through which the United States and Britain have allocated foods and other supplies pooled by them should be kept in operation as a part of UNRRA.

3. Speed is important.

While the UNRRA agreement covers relief and rehabilitation only for countries that have been occupied by the Axis, Lehman said the question of special consideration for India would be taken up at this first meeting of the organization.

He stressed the importance that seed, fertilizer and farm machinery can have in helping countries quickly build up their own food supplies."

A standard relief diet of 2000 calories per person per day has been agreed to by nations participating in the conference, he said.

Caring for a minimum of 20 million persons displaced from their homes "in Europe alone" presents one of the biggest UNRRA jobs, he said.

Asked whether UNRRA might not also take up the question of lifting the blockade so attempts could be made to get food to occupied countries immediately, the director general replied it would not "since that is a political question."

Speaking at the morning council meeting, delegates from Poland, Belgium, and Yugoslavia pointed up the needs of their countries. The Polish population is existing on a diet of 800 calories per person per day, with half that amount permitted Jewish citizens, Jan Kwapinski reported.

View of Hull Asked on Food For Europe

By the Associated Press

The advice of Secretary of State Cordell Hull was sought yesterday to help the Senate decide whether the military liabilities of supplying food to some of the starving millions in Europe outweigh the humanitarian aspects.

Senators Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa and Taft (Republican) of Ohio, authors of a resolution urging establishment of an immediate relief organization, said they would confer with Hull next week.

"I'm satisfied the majority of the committee will be willing to accept Mr. Hull's decision, whatever it is," Taft said.

Fresh from the Moscow conference, where he had opportunities for extended conversations with British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, Hull now may have information on Britain's attitude toward the project.

Several witnesses testified that Britain does not want any food sent to the occupied countries for fear that the Germans will benefit, at least indirectly.

Dingle M. Foot, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons Wednesday that to let substantial amounts of food into such countries as Belgium and Greece would constitute "a form of lend-lease for the enemy."

Senator Gillette said there had not been "one iota of evidence" in hearings here to support this contention.

Seasickness Cure Secret 'Weapon'

ducing gadgets, exhaustive sea tests were undertaken.

Preceding the discovery, the scientists investigated and debunked the hundreds of so-called "seasickness cures" put forth down through the years. Many German works on the subject were among those perused.

One "remedy" solemnly recorded was the suggestion of one unnamed genius who advised tht a a sure-cure for mal de mer was to "sit under a live oak tree."

Seasickness is now known to be a maladjustment of the equilibrium apparatus in the inner ear, caused by its inability to adjust itself to continued rapid changes in position. Psychological factors—such as the man who "just knows" he'll be seasick—also contribute.

One of the first discoveries was that chemical differences in human blood have no relation to seasickness. Also discovered was the fact that diet is not a basic cause.

A pitching motion, obtained in driving head-on into a heavy sea, is worse for most persons than rolling. "Up and down" motion, as in a small boat riding high waves, is worst of all.

An "easy-going" or fundamentally stable person may get seasick as quickly as an unstable neurotic individual—but probably 25 percent of all unstable persons get seasick "simply because they think they will."

The seagoing man is just as likely to get seasick as the confirmed landlubber on his first trip. Many sailors suffer constantly from seasickness in rough weather, while others always are affected on their first day or two afloat.

Unionist Impresses Brewster Probers

Maas Vows Support to UAW Officer, Who Said Plant Failed to Provide Parts

By Mary Spargo

Congress will be back of Paul Krebs, secretary of Local 365, UAW-CIO, in his efforts to further production at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., a member of the House Naval Affairs subcommittee pledged yesterday after hearing the union leader testify.

Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, commended Krebs on his "cooperative attitude and evident sincerity," said the Brewster union needed more men like him and volunteered congressional support.

During a gruelling day of testimony interrupted by sarcasm and charges of draft dodging, Krebs doggedly stuck to his contention that the prime responsibility for loafing at Brewster was directly due to management failure to provide parts and to a former company president's hiring of unneeded help in order to cushion the effects of Selective Service.

Two members of the committee, Maas and Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana made it clear that the effect of his testimony was to leave in doubt whether the management, labor, the Navy Department or all three will be charged in the committee report with failure to produce Navy fighter planes in the plants which have been under investigation for six weeks.

A few days ago Hebert, hard-boiled former city editor of a New Orleans newspaper, drew from Thomas Vincent de Lorenzo, union president, admission of the use of 5 or 6 aliases, "drawn from a telephone book or maybe a hat," and acknowledgement of falsification of statements on Federal documents. These admissions were followed by an announcement from the Justice Department that evidence would soon be laid before a grand jury in New York or Philadelphia concerning De Lorenzo's activities.

Krebs' criticism of former company president, Frederick Riebel, jr., for excessive hiring when men already on the payroll were begging for work, drew from Hebert the comment:

"Well, I personally wouldn't do business with Mr. Riebel, and God knows, I don't know how anybody could get along with Mr. De Lorenzo."

Labor Witness Stirs Ire

Another labor witness yesterday, Gabriel Joseph De Angelis, union local financial secretary, drew a steady stream of congressional wrath upon his head.

The chunky Italian-born official, chairman of the education committee and editor of the union paper, Aero Notes, revealed under questioning that he, like Krebs, had been given a 2-B draft rating as an essential worker in an essential industry, a classification commonly given union leaders.

He said he was a resident of the Bronx, 34, married, with a child 4 months old.

At the conclusion of the hearing Maas told De Angelis that he was personally going to do everything he could to see that the union leader's draft deferment was canceled. He said the writings of De Angelis had been "inflammatory."

"It is isn't necessary for young whippersnappers to be deferred to carry on union work," Maas said. He asserted older men better trained in sound union activity would do better.

The newspaper De Angelis edits had printed a virulent personal attack upon Maas some days ago as a "labor baiter."

Krebs told the committee he was 32, unmarried, and a resident of Brooklyn.

Johnson Baits Witness

"Ever hear of the Brooklyn draft dodgers?" tartly inquired Representative Johnson (Republican) of California.

"Mr. Congressman, I don't think that's quite fair," interjected Krebs. He disclosed he was suffering from stomach ulcers and would probably be rejected for service anyway.

Krebs called upon the committee to secure and make part of its record a copy of the War Manpower Commission's report on conditions at Brewster.

He said the report bore out all charges made by him as a union official and had been made at union instigation. The report, Krebs said, was preceded by one drawn up by the union and sent to Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, regional war manpower director of New York State. He offered the report in evidence.

Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia who had been pressing Krebs for "documentation of these charges against the Brewster management," said he would ask for the report "if the committee decides it needs it."

Both Maas and Herbert expressed the opinion during the hearings that management, labor and the Navy Department, described by Maas as "vacillating" were responsible for production failure.

Cites Manpower Report

Krebs called upon the committee to secure and make a part of its record a copy of a report on conditions at Brewster made by the War Manpower Commission through officials sent to the plants from Washington. The WMC report, he claimed, supported all charges made by him against the management.

He said that the union, in an attempt to secure production, had sent in a report, with management approval, to the regional director of War Manpower in New York State, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, requesting an investigation.

Krebs asked permission to put the union report and requests in the confidential files. Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, who had been pressing the union leader for "documentation of these charges against the Brewster management," said the committee would ask for the War Manpower report "if we decide it is necessary."

Committee hearings here will resume Tuesday when Ralph Singer, former Brewster president, will be heard.

Defeat Must Disgrace Japan's War Chiefs, Nurse Declares

LIBERATED NURSE—Lieut. (j. g.) Leona Jackson of the Navy Nurse Corps, who was a Jap prisoner of war for six months, and Mrs. George Clark, president of the Greenbelt, Md., Woman's Club, exchange greetings at a meeting of the club in the Greenbelt elementary school auditorium

"The Allies must beat the Japs so badly that their military leaders will be disgraced forever. That is the only way that we can insure peace," Lieut. (j. g.) Leona Jackson, United States Navy nurse, told the members of the Greenbelt, Md., Woman's Club at a meeting held in the elementary school auditorium Thursday evening.

The meeting was the first in a series to be held by the Woman's Club to raise funds for the establishment of a nursing scholarship.

Lieutenant Jackson, a resident of Greenbelt and now stationed in Washington, was held as a prisoner of war in Japan for six months after she had been among those captured when the Japs invaded the island of Guam on December 10, 1941.

A native of Dayton, Ohio, she has been a Navy nurse for the past 7½ years. She served on Guam for 10 months before being taken a prisoner.

She was taken to Zentsugi, Japan, where she was held for two months and was then transferred to a prison camp in Kobe, Japan. She was released in July of last year and was brought to this country on the exchange liner Gripsholm.

Lieutenant Jackson told of her experiences while serving on Guam and of her incarceration in Japan. She stated that the treatment of war prisoners varies.

Some prison camp officials treat their charges fairly while in other camps under different officials the treatment is very bad, she asserted.

Navy Board To Check Up On Shore Posts

In a major move to increase the efficiency of all naval shore establishments, Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, announced yesterday the formation of a Navy manpower survey board headed by Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, former commander of the Eastern sea frontier.

Knox explained at his press conference that the war emergency caused "a tremendous expansion in the Navy which had to be met speedily." He admitted that as a result in many instances the wrong kind of people are now in certain jobs, both civilian and naval personnel. In other cases plants are "overstaffed."

The time has come when a tapering off and streamlining of all naval shore establishments can be made, he said. The new board will not interfere with private companies working under contract to the Navy, Knox emphasized.

The board will make thorough investigations of all naval shore activities and will be assisted by subordinate boards composed of both prominent civilians and naval officers selected and appointed on a regional basis.

Members of the board, in addition to Admiral Andrews, will be: Rear Admiral Charles W. Fisher, director of the Shore Establishment Division, Navy Department; Arthur S. Fleming, member of the Civil Service Commission; John A. Stevenson, president, Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, Philadelphia, and Capt. Paul F. Foster, USNR, assistant naval inspector general, who will be both a member and secretary to the board.

Nelson May Adopt Wilson WPB Job

nard M. Baruch, 73-year-old financier, who was recently appointed director of the War and Postwar Adjustment Unit of the Office of War Mobilization. Nelson was said to have requested the President for a clarification of Baruch's functions.

Other Changes Expected

Other changes in the WPB top command are expected, including the resignation of Hiland G. Batcheller, vice chairman for operations, who has been under considerable pressure to return to the presidency of the Alleghany-Ludlum Steel Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Batcheller was appointed head of the WPB steel division at the same time that Wilson accepted his first WPB post. In June of this year, he was elevated to the vice chairmanship, with direct authority over WPB industry divisions including the steel division. His departure is expected in several weeks.

Wilson who came to WPB in September, 1942, at the specific request of President Roosevelt and after months of urging by Nelson, became heir to much of Nelson's authority in February as a result of a feud with Program Vice Chairman Ferdinand Eberstadt. Nelson settled the row by dismissing Eberstadt and delegating enormous power to Wilson.

Freed of administrative routine, Nelson turned his attention to questions of civilian supply, and postwar problems, leaving Wilson actually running the main show. With Wilson at the helm, Nelson also was freed to make his trip abroad "on a special mission for the President," the nature of which has not been disclosed.

Nelson was said to have written a letter to Wilson praising him for his work at WPB, particularly in connection with the aircraft and destroyer escort programs.

Wilson was said to be anxious to go back to General Electric to (1) handle its vast war program which runs into billions, and (2) steer the giant corporation into the postwar period. A large portion of GE contracts are in electronics which has proved a major production bottleneck.

Government Seeks Further Curbs on AP

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Department of Justice sought today to restrain perpetually the Associated Press from enforcing any by-laws which would permit the news-gathering cooperative, in passing upon applications for membership, to consider "the actual or potential competition" between an applicant and a member newspaper in the same city.

Three other restraints were suggested by Government attorneys in a proposed form of judgment, filed in the United States District Court. A special court on October 6 upheld the right of the Associated Press to pass upon admission of applicants, but said that the by-laws "in their present form" violated the antitrust laws.

The Government sought, in the civil suit filed August 28, 1942, to compel the AP to admit to membership any newspaper willing to pay its proportionate share of the cost of gathering news.

The additional restraints, as outlined by the Government and to all of which the AP has 30 days to make counter-proposals, would:

1. Nullify the by-laws which "withhold the services of the Associated Press from persons other than members of the Associated Press."

2. Nullify the by-law which "restrict the members of the Associated Press and persons in their employ from furnishing spontaneous news gathered by them to persons other than the Associated Press and its members."

3. Declare illegal the exclusive news agreement between the Associated Press and the Canadian Press.

The proposed decree would permit the AP to apply for modification of these three provisions "upon furnishing satisfactory proof that they have amended the by-laws . . . in conformity with the opinion of this court."

The court directed that the by-laws be changed to prevent a member in the same field (morning, evening or Sunday) in the same area as an applicant from imposing any conditions for admission.

In conformity with the court's opinion, the Government agreed to dismissal of its complaint challenging as illegal the purchase by the AP of Wide World photos from the New York Times.

Wives of Sailors May Now Join WAVES

Navy wives may now join the WAVES as long as their husbands are enlisted personnel, but wives of officers must still remain civilians or join the WACS, the Navy announced yesterday in a modification of its rule governing admission to the women's reserve.

Although there has been a ban on wives of naval officers and men entering the Navy, once in the service a WAVE has been able to marry a naval man, and it is expected that a number of new recruits will join as a result of the ban being relaxed.

Mine Travel Study Ordered By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the War Labor Board coal decision and then appointed a tripartite three-man committee to make an exact study of underground travel time to be used in establishing a permanent wage agreement for the coal industry.

The coal dispute has raged around the travel time issue since last March 10 and has resulted in four general strikes. The appointment of the committee was the first action by the Government to find out for its own guidance what the travel time underground really amounts to.

Repeated requests for precise data, made by WLB over the period, have been ignored by both miners and coal operators.

Pact Is Approved

The WLB coal wage decision approved with minor reservations a pact made by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis while the fourth general strike was in progress. Presidential approval was required under the Connally-Smith Act because the mines were seized by the Government under the act.

The accurate travel time figures would be used in negotiating a new contract to govern operation of the mines after Government possession is terminated.

Appointed to the committee are: Morris L. Cooke, former head of the Rural Electrification Administration and head of WLB's original coal panel, for the public; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the UMW and former labor member of WLB for the miners, and R. I. Ireland, president of the Hanna Coal Co. and spokesman for the northern Appalachian operators, for the mine owners.

Negotiations on technical details of the Ickes-Lewis agreement have been in progress at the Department of Interior for several days.

One of the questions that must be decided is whether the miners will receive $40 in discharge of retroactive liability accumulated by the operators earlier this year. Illinois operators agreed to make the $40 payment, but the other operators have maintained that they are not obliged to do so.

operation with management for all-out production and in its acceptance of wage controls.

Warning to Unions

It is our counsel and most earnest injunction that the [John L.] Lewis defiance not be an example which, if followed by other unions, would require legislation not only more thoroughgoing but, in its possible features, unfair to the labor movement and unwise for the war effort."

In a letter to Davis, Green said that the statements made were "unjustifiable," and added, "You and your associates have rendered a great disservice to labor and to the public through the publication of said expressed opinions.

"The facts are that labor has accepted more bitter than sweet," Green said. "The contrast between stabilized wages and soaring prices is glaringly disappointing."

Hits Industry Members

With respect to the industry members, he said:

"I am confident that they do not represent the sentiment of employers generally throughout the United States, for if they ask for forceful and compulsory legislation against labor, labor could ask in return for forceful and compulsory legislation against industry."

Stating that he "resented" and "protested" the comments by the public group, Green said, "How can you and your associate public members of the WLB expect labor to continue to participate in the work of your board with a feeling of trust and confidence in its integrity, its fairness, and its obligation to give labor a square deal."

Public Member Wayne L. Morse did not join in the public opinion because he cast a lone dissenting vote against the decision in the coal case on the ground that the action represented a "capitulation" to Lewis during a strike.

Liquidation of FSA Farm Project in Arizona Sought

Florence, Ariz., Nov. 12 (AP).—Suit for receivership and liquidation of Casa Grande Valley Farms, Inc., Farm Security Administration's million-dollar cooperative farm project, has been filed in Superior Court here by 25 of the 35 members of the association.

Residents who brought the action charge that mismanagement and "costly and extravagant practices" resulting from vested control in the FSA has cost the project thousands of dollars and that it would be insolvent now had it not been for the war and the increased value of agricultural projects and livestock.

The FSA testified at a House subcommittee hearing more than a year ago that the Government had invested $1,250,000, not including an operation loan, in the 5000-acre enterprise, an investment of more than $32,000 for each of the then 39 families.

C. B. Baldwin, FSA administrator, recommended at that time that all FSA rehabilitation projects be sold and liquidated.

It is estimated in the complaint filed by members that the association's assets have increased $125,000 because of the war and now are worth $100,000 in excess of liabilities.

The association borrowed $173,260 from the Government to begin its operations in 1937. It does not own the irrigated land and buildings, but only the livestock, poultry, machinery, other equipment and produce.

Surplus assets would be distributed among association members proportionate to their interests.

Nov. 25 Proclaimed Thanksgiving Day

President Roosevelt, who once experimented with an earlier Thanksgiving Day—on which many States declined to go along—yesterday proclaimed the traditional last Thursday, November 25, as the day "for expressing our thanks to God for his blessings" in 1943.

These, he said, have been many, including the biggest food-crop year in American history.

"November having been set aside as 'Food Fights for Freedom' month," his proclamation said, "it is fitting that Thanksgiving Day be made the culmination of the observance of the month by a high resolve on the part of all to produce and save food and to 'share and play square' with food.

"May we on Thanksgiving Day and on every day express our gratitude and zealously devote ourselves to our duties as individuals and as a Nation. May each of us dedicate his utmost efforts to speeding the victory which will bring new opportunities for peace and brotherhood among men."

De Marigny Says He Won't Leave Nassau

Nassau, Nov. 12 (AP).—Alfred de Marigny quietly defied today the murder trial jury which recommended that he be deported from this British colony—and at the same time cleared him of the charge that he murdered his pretty wife's father, Sir Harry Oakes.

"I'm staying in Nassau," he told reporters who had written about his 22-day trial in the Bahamas Supreme Court.

With him as he talked at his Victoria ave. cottage was his wife, Nancy, radiant with happiness on the first day of freedom her husband has known since he was arrested July 9.

Appearing rested and dapper in a jauntily checked jacket and light tan trousers, De Marigny was thoroughly enjoying himself. Sheafs of congratulatory cablegrams came to him during the day and he was acclaimed by crowds on the streets.

He showed no sign of worry about the ousting suggestion from the jury.

Going Fishing

As soon as the meeting with reporters was ended, he planned to go for a sail in his star class boat. What next?

"I am going fishing next week at Exuma Cays."

"With Higgs?" came a question prompted by the plans of Chief Defense Attorney Godfrey Higgs to take his family for a fishing trip to the same spot.

"No, with my wife," he replied, and Nancy beamed.

He said he was "tried 10 per cent for killing Sir Harry Oakes and 90 per cent for marrying his daughter."

"My trial interesting? he asked.

"No, it was boring." Again he gave an expressive shrug.

"It got me out of jail each day—and jail is no place to go, my friends."

"Freedom?

"I didn't know what that was in jail.

"I never felt that I was on trial at any time.

"I felt objective, as though I were there as a witness."

De Marigny said the Oakes slaying "was something out of my conception, it has 20 or 30 angles."

"It could have been for blackmail, or for many things," he added. "None was investigated. When I was arrested the case was closed."

Nancy sat beside her husband on a small settee separating the living and dining rooms of the cottage, which had come to life again. She wore a turquoise blue wool suit with a pale pink blouse and huge pearl earrings.

Comforted Attorneys

De Marigny said that before the trial ended he felt like the Emperor Maxmillian in Mexico, who called a priest to comfort him and then himself comforted the priest.

"All day yesterday I comforted my attorneys," he explained. "They were so worred for me."

The talk turned again to the deportation recommendation.

If he were forced to leave, where would he go?

"I'd stay in Nassau," he said. "Sure. Sure. Definitely."

Nancy was asked where she would most like to go.

"Nassau is my home," she said. "I'm a Bahamian. I've been a Bahamian since I was 11 years old." She is 19 now.

De Marigny joked about his statement that he was tried mostly for marrying Oakes' daughter.

"I'm a jinx," said Nancy.

"I like most women," De Marigny said, "my wife had bad taste in choosing a husband."

"You should have been more careful too, Freddie," retorted Nancy.

Told how happy Marquis Georges de Visdelou has been over the acquittal, De Marigny laughed:

"Why shouldn't he be?" he asked. "He's my pal. Georges is the Dr. Hyde part of me."

Describing the tense wait while the jury was deliberating, Nancy related:

"I was casting about for what this all reminded me of. Suddenly the thought struck me that it must be like a man waiting for his wife to have a baby."

"Twins, my dear," De Marigny whispered.

Senate Group Approves D. C. Insurance Bills

A Senate District subcommittee headed by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, yesterday reported favorably two bills giving the District superintendent of insurance control over fire and casualty rates and levying a maximum fine of $200 for violation of regulations.

The report on the first bill was signed by Senators Burton and Buck (Republican) of Delaware, with only Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota dissenting. His opposition to the measure was voiced last week when he declared that he felt that rate studies could be accomplished without legislation and that competition should keep rates under control.

The report pointed out that the District now has no control over fire and casualty rates and that during the last 20 years, premiums paid amounted to 43 million dollars while losses totaled only 13 million, thus leaving 30 million to be absorbed by the companies for profit and expenses.

Commissioner John Russell Young's letter to the District Committee recommending adoption of the measure said that out of every premium dollar paid by policy holders, 70 cents is profit for insurance companies.

The second bill provides immediate penalties for violations of insurance laws in cases where revocation or suspension of licenses is considered too severe by the superintendent.

Home Rule Hearings May Begin Nov. 30

By Anne Hagner

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, who yesterday introduced an enabling act to set up a three-man charter commission for the District, declared that he believed that hearings on the measure probably would begin November 30, simultaneously with those on two other home-rule proposals.

"While I cannot speak for Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee," the Senator said, "I feel sure that the whole question of administration in the Capital should be considered at the same time."

The other two measures are:

A bill offered by McCarran to grant Washingtonians the right to vote for a seven-man board of commissioners who in turn would choose a city manager.

An earlier resolution by Holman giving the District the power to choose its own type of government by referendum.

More Direct Method

The new bill Holman describes as a "simplification" and a more direct method of accomplishing the aim of his first resolution—the principal change being that the charter commission is composed of three men, one selected by the President, and one each by the respective chairmen of the Senate and House District Committees

"I still would like a practical suggestion whereby five men could make up the charter commission instead of three, with the additional two deriving their membership from the choice of bona fide permanent residents of Washington," he stated "I would like the genesis of representation to come from these persons"

Was Termed Cumbersome

Concerning his other resolution, Holman said: "My critics called it a cumbersome one, so I was eager to simplify it."

The suggestion came, he announced, from a longtime friend and resident of Washington who preferred to remain anonymous.

In introducing the measure on the Senate floor, he asserted that the bill was "in harmony with my efforts to provide a better government for the District than it now has, the need for which was disclosed by hearings recently on Gallinger Municipal Hospital."

Senator Holman was chairman of the subcommittee that investigated the institution last month.

Gestapo Train Wrecked by Poles

London, Nov. 12 (INS).—Underground reports reaching London tonight said hundreds of Gestapo agent were killed or wounded when Polish guerillas wrecked a train carrying the Nazi strong-arm men to Warsaw to cope with an outbreak of bloody clashes between Poles and Germans.

Another Polish report declared the Germans are frantically evacuating Lwow and other eastern regions in the face of the Russian advance toward Poland's borders.

(The Polish clandestine radio SWIT, in a broadcast recorded by CBS, reported that all Polish roads are clogged with evacuees.

(The British radio asserted the Poles have destroyed at least "one third" of all military trains passing through Poland.

Dr. Ballou to Be Honored December 8

A testimonial dinner to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, who last month retired as superintendent of District schools, will be sponsored by the Washington Board of Trade on Wednesday, December 8, the board announced yesterday after a meeting of the dinner committee.

The dinner was first proposed in a resolution approved by the board October 20 as a tribute to Dr. Ballou's 23 years of service as head of local schools.

Granville Gude, president of the board, is chairman of the dinner, which will be attended by at least 700 persons, board officials estimated.

Among those appointed to serve on the committee under Gude are: Senators McCarran and O'Mahoney, Representatives Randolph and Mahon, the District Commissioners, Albert W. Atwood, Dr. Seth R. Brooks, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. P. C. Elliott, Robert V. Fleming, the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., Robert L. Haycock, John Locher, Msgr. Poll Tax Battle Revived in Senate

To Select City

GOP Calls Meeting on Convention

With all thought of a short campaign abandoned, GOP National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler yesterday called a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Chicago January 10 and 11 to select a 1944 Republican convention city.

Democratic National Chairman Frank C. Walker, whose short campaign bid was turned down cold by Republicans, is expected to call his own committee for a convention city hunt in the same month.

Walker and Spangler fought it out publicly months ago over Democratic proposals for late convention dates. Spangler then said he favored no change in pace unless there were positive assurances the President would not run.

Chicago Likely Choice

Chicago, which in 1938 bid $200,000 for the Democratic convention, stood an odds-on chance of staging both party meetings. Republicans regard the Midwest as heart-center of their strength and Democrats would like to regain it.

Entirely aside from political considerations, Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman has urged choice of Chicago as the best central location in view of transportation difficulties.

Republican National Committeemen generally favored the usual midsummer convention (June or July). Democrats were expected to follow their custom of waiting until the GOP slate is selected before naming their own ticket leaders. In view of Walker's plea for a short campaign, the Democratic convention may be later than usual.

Other Cities Interested

Other cities reported to have put out tentative feelers for the Republican convention include Philadelphia, which paid $150,000 for the privilege in 1936; Cleveland, Atlantic City and Detroit. St. Louis and Los Angeles have been interested in the Democratic convention.

Choice of Chicago by the Republicans would not be without intra-party significance. Representatives of nearly every party faction have been toying with the idea of filling in the free-for-all Illinois primaries. There Wendell Willkie has served notice he will fight it out with Col. Robert R. McCormick, if the Chicago publisher gets into the race.

An Illinois MacArthur-for-President group already has announced it will enter the name of the general. Representative Dirksen of Illinois has indicated he will run in his own right. And Governor Bricker of Ohio, who announced he will file in his own State, may decide to use Illinois as well for a proving ground.

Reporting of Bill Sparks Threats Of New Filibuster

The House-approved anti-poll-tax bill, perennially defeated by a Southern filibuster yesterday was approved by a 12 to 6 vote of the Senate Judiciary Committee and immediately touched off Senate pyrotechnics.

Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo (Democrat) of Mississippi, one of 16 Senators who are pledged to kill the bill, served unvarnished notice of filibuster.

"In the days to come it will be another case of Bryan's free and unlimited coinage of words instead of silver," Bilbo told the Senate.

"The responsibility must rest on the sponsors of the proposed legislation, because they know full well that this question will be discussed at length, without limit."

Five Republicans joined with seven Democrats on the Judiciary Committee to send the buffeted measure once again to the Senate, while four Democrats and two Republicans voted "no." Gibed Senator Tom Connally of Texas, leader of the Southern Sixteen: "The committee ought to hang a crepe on the door."

Despite warnings of unlimited debate, there appeared little doubt that the legislation which last year tied the Senate in knots will again be the Senate's "unfinished business." Now the bill is reported, any Senator can move to call it up. Getting it to a vote will be another matter.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who last year led a futile effort to impose cloture to force a vote on the bill, declined comment on the committee's action. He said he expected Chairman Frederick Van Nuys, or a member of his committee, to call up the measure.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming meanwhile made two unsuccessful efforts to persuade the committee to report instead his resolution ending poll taxes by constitutional amendment. His first move to substitute this for the outright repealer was defeated, 11 to 7. His next effort to report the constitutional amendment in addition to the flat repeal bill lost on a tie, 9 to 9.

Senator William Langer (Republican) of North Dakota asked reconsideration of this vote, and on Monday the committee is expected to lay O'Mahoney's resolution before the Senate. Senators who oppose the anti-poll-tax legislation on constitutional grounds may get a chance to vote on the constitutional amendment method.

In reporting the bill, the Judiciary Committee voted as follows:

For—Van Nuys of Indiana, McCarran of Nevada, Chandler of Kentucky, Kilgore of West Virginia, Murdock of Utah, McFarland of Arizona and Wheeler of Montana, (Democrats) and Danaher of Connecticut. Wiley of Wisconsin, Langer of North Dakota, Ferguson of Michigan and Wherry of Nebraska, (Republicans).

Against—Hatch of New Mexico, Connally of Texas, O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Andrews of Florida, (Democrats), and Austin of Vermont and Revercomb of West Virginia, (Republicans).

First Lady Speaks on Pacific Tour

"We can be proud of our boys in the South Pacific," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told a capacity audience of 4000 last night at Constitution Hall, opening the 56th annual lecture series of the National Geographic Society.

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, who called the speaker "the world's most versatile geographer." "No President's wife has traveled more than our distinguished guest," he said.

The First Lady was particularly impressed with the admiration of the people of New Zealand for the American boys. The New Zealanders were very much disappointed when American soldiers who had gone from their islands to do the first fighting on Guadalcanal, were sent to Australia rather than returned to their island bases at the close of their service in the Solomons.

"My trip was certainly not for pleasure," Mrs. Roosevelt insisted. "In one afternoon I visited 52 hospital wards."

One of the hardest lessons the American boys had to learn was not to trust a Jap. She told how an American chaplain, while carrying a wounded Jap on his back, was stabbed to death by the latter.

Many of our boys are really learning how to live, Mrs. Roosevelt thinks. She believes few of them will be spoiled by Government care because she found evidence on every hand that the soldiers were improving in resourcefulness.

Poorer Quality

Local Supply Of Yule Trees Held Ample

By Walter Wood

Generally speaking, there WILL be Christmas trees available this year for all who want one, but their quality may be poor, according to calculations of three war agencies completed yesterday.

Paul Bunyan won't have to be called upon to fell them, either, it was said by the Johnny Inkslingers of the WPB, OPA and ODT who have rounded out a job just as big as the one done by the giant woodsman's chief figurer in the Smiling Lake country after the winter of the blue snow.

Nationally, the harvest of Christmas trees is smaller than last year, but the local supply is expected to be ample, according to a WPB spokesman.

One Sure Way

One sure way of getting a tree, of course, is to go out with an ax and cut it yourself, an official said.

The ODT, meanwhile, prepared to announce that no extra gasoline will be allowed growers for transporting the evergreens to market. Railroads also will be asked by Transportation Director Joseph Eastman's office to use nothing but old-type wooden boxcars for shipping trees.

This will mean, it was said, that preferred species—Douglas, white and balsam fir and spruce, etc.—will not be plentiful on markets outside the areas in which they are grown.

No large shipments are expected this year from Canada, Northwest and Western States, upper New England or the Great Lakes States, the main suppliers, WPB said.

It is here that the local trees come in to offset the national deficiency. They may not be as beautiful as their finer brothers under the bark. They may, in fact, be just scrub pines.

They can, however, be equally as ritzy because OPA has set no ceiling on their price and has no plans for doing so, a spokesman said.

Accordingly, trees may be made almost as decorative as last year, said WPB. Traditional glass balls are still manufactured, as well as other glass-product gadgets and some of plastic.

Missing in some instances will be tinsel and "icicles," which because they are made of metal, have not been manufactured since late 1942 because of WPB restrictions on the use of critical materials.

Electric lights, too, will be unobtainable, except from last year's inventory, it was said.

But all in all, and with a little improvising, Christmas trees can be made the same peaceful symbol.

P. S.—There's no need to worry about decreasing the lumber supply by cutting trees if they are encroaching on pasture land or are in areas which need thinning, WPB said.

Dr. Swormstedt Rites Are Set For Monday

Funeral services for Dr. Lyman Beecher Swormstedt, 90 of 2 Thomas Circle nw., who died here Thursday, will be held at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N st. nw., at 2 p. m. Monday. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

At the time of his retirement a year ago, Dr. Swormstedt was one of Washington's oldest practicing physicians, having maintained a steady practice here for 62 years.

The son of a physician, Dr. Swormstedt received his early medical training from his father. He was a graduate of Hahneman Medical College in Philadelphia and a native of Carrollton, Md.

He became affiliated with the Masonic Lodge in 1890 and in 1940 received special recognition for his 50 years in Masonry. He was a member of the Almas Temple, Pentalpha Lodge, No. 23, the Mount Vernon Chapter, No. 3, R. A. M. and the Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar.

At various time in his career Dr. Swormstedt had disapproved of the place the medical "specialist" was gaining in the field. He predicted, however, that the general practitioner would always maintain a strong influence in the medical profession despite the trend toward specialization.

Fellow physicians credited him with having one of the soundest medical understandings of any physician in Washington. He was associated with Homeopathic Hospital since its founding in 1881 and until his retirement. He was a member of Homeopathic Medical Society.

Surviving are his wife Mabel G. Swormstedt of Washington, a former president of the Women's City Club, and a daughter, Mrs. Helen Mansfield of Wellesley, Mass.

Mrs. Mary F. Garner

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald Garner, who died Tuesday in Atlanta, Ga., will be held today at 10 a. m. at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Bethesda, Md., with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Active in Atlanta church affairs, Mrs. Garner was a past president of the Ladies' Altar Society of the Cathedral of Christ the King, treasurer of the Catholic War Service Committee and of the Committee for the Extension of Religious Education of the Atlanta Deanery, National Council of Catholic Women. At the time of her death she was serving as a Red Cross nurses' aid.

Services were held in Atlanta Thursday when solemn high requiem mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. Msgr. Moylan of the Cathedral of Christ the King.

Mrs. Garner is survived by her husband, her mother, Mrs. James E. Fitzgerald, of Bethesda, Md.; and a sister, Mrs. Ralph P. Dunn, 6700 Selkirk Drive, Bethesda, from whose home the funeral will be held.

Mrs. Martha A. Given

Funeral services for Mrs. Martha A. Given of 2126 Connecticut ave. nw., who died at the home of a daughter in Latrobe, Pa., Thursday, will be held in that city tomorrow with burial in Unity Cemetery there, it was announced yesterday.

A native of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Given came to Washington about 25 years ago following the death of her husband, Thomas Hartley Given, a Pittsburgh industrialist.

Mrs. Given was a large contributor to Washington charities, to which she is said to have given several hundred thousand dollars.

She is survived by two children, Mrs. Carlos del Mar of 2438 Belmont rd. nw., and Mrs. Fred B. McFeely of Latrobe, at whose home she died, and two grandchildren, Mrs. William North Sturtevant, formerly of Washington and now residing in Florida, and George Y. Wheeler of 2543 Waters dr. nw.

Dr. Adam Kemble

Dr. Adam Kemble, 63, genito-urinary specialist and a longtime member of the executive committee of Sibley Hospital, died yesterday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Laura Kemble, at Mount Carmel, Pa., following an illness of several months.

Active in the District Medical Society, Dr. Kemble maintained offices in the Cecil Apartments, 15th and L sts. nw. He was a native of Mount Carmel and was graduated from the George Washington University Medical School in 1903. During the first World War he served as a major with the Medical Corps at Walter Reed Hospital.

He was a member of the John Gardner Post of the American Legion, the University Club, the Sons of the American Revolution and the Chevy Chase Club.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at Mount Carmel with burial in the cemetery there.

Miss Loretta Caywood

Miss Loretta E. Caywood, 92, died at her home, 6838 6th st. nw., yesterday as the result of the infirmities of age.

Miss Caywood was a native of Herndon, Va., but had been a resident of Washington for the greater portion of her life. She had considerable real estate holdings here.

She is survived by a nephew, Clyde Garrett, and two nieces, Mrs. Rose Dutwieler and Mrs. Mary Evans, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw., Monday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Butter, Onion Shortages Hit Dealers Here

Washington is suffering currently from a shortage of butter and onions, dairymen and wholesale produce dealers said yesterday.

One of the largest produce dealers in the city was without a single sack of onions yesterday, and reported that he hoped to be able to get at least one carload today.

Large chain stores were without onions, and in some stores where they were obtainable there was only one variety.

The onion picture is not scheduled to change for the better until a new growing season brings in a fresh crop, it was said.

The shortage of fresh milk has been given as the reason for the lack of butter. Another is the diversion of dairy products to the armed forces and lend-lease, operators said:

All butter used in Washington is imported from other areas; as the local milkshed is able to supply only the whole milk and cream needed in the city.

Stores where butter has been obtainable during the past few days have been forced to ration purchases to half a pound, it was reported.

Postlude

Wild Plays Concerto Flawlessly

By Ray C. B. Brown

Lieut. Charles Brendler conducts the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra on Friday night in Departmental Auditorium. Soloist: Earl Wild. Program: "Roman Carnival" (Berlioz), Nocturne from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn), "Haffner" Symphony in D major (Mozart), Piano Concerto in F minor (Chopin), Slavonic Dance No. 15 in C major (Dvorak).

On the principle of the Elizabethan proverb about "an ill wind that bloweth no man no good," local music-lovers have profited by the Axis cyclone that swirled so many talented young musicians into the United States Navy Band Orchestra. One of them, Earl Wild, who has been heard here many times during the past year, was soloist last evening at the orchestra's second concert of the winter season, and played Chopin's F minor concerto so beautifully as to place him among its best interpreters. His reading was refined in tone, plastic in phrasing, poetically motivated and communicative in emotional glow; on the technical side it was fluent with the deceptive ease that appears effortless.

Having to build a program around a familiar concerto, Lieut. Charles Brendler selected for the purpose other familiar music, with a care, however, to keeping the whole concert on a relative plane of merit. He began with the "Roman Carnival" overture that preserves Berlioz's opera, "Benvenuto Cellini," from complete oblivion, and followed that with the nocturne from Mendelssohn's incidental music for "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The symphony was the one in D major that Mozart put together by choosing four movements from a serenade hurriedly written for a festive occasion in the home of the Salaburg merchant, Sigmund Haffner. It was written just after he had finished his opera, "Die Entfuehrungaus dem Serail," and the theme of the finale is identical with Osmin's second song in the opera. The concert closed with Dvorak's fifteenth Slavonic Dance in C major, which is a Kolo, a folk dance of the Jugoslavs.

Sister Kenny Tells Stricken Boy He'll Walk

New York, Nov. 12 (INS).—Eight-year-old Jerry Silverman knew tonight for the first time in two years that someday he will walk again.

For two years Jerry, a victim of infantile paralysis, has been hospitalized, unable to move his legs.

Today the boy had a visitor—Sister Elizabeth Kenny, the Australian nurse whose methods have revolutionized treatment of infantile paralysis.

"Relax," she told the youngster, quietly. "Don't think of anything."

Slowly Sister Kenny massaged the thin, wasted limb. Then, carefully, she began to bend it, while a ring of doctors and nurses watched breathlessly.

Jerry seemed on the point of tears, but his mouth firmed and he made no sound. Behind the bed, standing pale and intent, stood the boy's father, William Silverman of Brooklyn.

Then Sister Kenny spoke.

"This muscle is not denervated," she said. "It is not affected by polio; it is alienated only because when he was taken sick it pained him to move his leg; so he did not. When the pain had ceased, the muscle had been inactive so long it had lost its sense. I will now restore that sense."

She touched the leg again, then commanded: "Jerry! concentrate on your foot. Think of it. Move it!"

And Jerry moved it himself.

"Thank God!" breathed the boy's father. "That's the first time he has moved his leg in two years."

Sister Kenny smiled.

"He will unquestionably recover," she said.

Women Urge Equal Rights At Capitol

Two hundred members of women's organizations met yesterday in the crypt of the Capitol to celebrate the birth 128 years ago of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, pioneer feminist, and to denounce Congressional "blockade" of the equal rights amendment.

The presiding officer, Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic National Committee member from Pennsylvania, protested the action of the House Judiciary Committee, which recently tabled the amendment.

"The amendment will become a part of the Constitution," she predicted, "and no opposition—not even broken promises and double-dealing by a few members of the committee—can prevent it.

"Gentlemen, the sands of the tenure of your terms of office are running low. Act now while you yet have the opportunity."

Representative Reed (Republican) of Illinois pledged wholehearted GOP support of the amendment "to bring the long struggle of women for equality as citizens of this democracy to a prompt and successful conclusion."

Representative Mary Norton (Democrat) of New Jersey joined with other speakers in paying tribute to the Nineteenth Century women's leader.

Two Found Guilty In Gambling Cases

Thomas N. Nickles, 55, and Louis Chopoff, 49, operators of the United Nations Social Club 1132 18th st. nw., were found guilty by a District Court jury yesterday of gambling violations between September, 1942, and May, 1943.

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher set no date for sentencing and raised bond for each defendant from $500 to $1000. Assistant United States Attorney T. Peter Ansberry prosecuted the case.

OPA Lends Steak House 65,000 Points

A loan of 65,000 ration points for the purchase of meats, fats, oils and cheese—two-thirds of an alleged overdraft—was granted Hammel's Restaurant, steak house at 416 10th st. nw., late yesterday by the District OPA.

The loan was granted, it was said, contingent upon the establishment's ability to reduce its consumption of points by one-third.

All of the "borrowed" points must be repaid, an OPA spokesman revealed, one-third, the amount above the loan, during this month and December, and the loaned amount during the first six months of 1944.

OPA said the adjustment was made in line with a policy to keep open to the public as many eating houses as possible. The loan, it was asserted, is conditional upon strict compliance with OPA regulations.

Future violations, OPA pointed out, will result in immediate suspension of all points and payment of the loan on demand. The entire amount will also become due immediately.

A similar application for a point loan for the Stables, located at 2622 E st. nw., operated by Mrs. Lillian J. Richards, is still pending. The latter restaurant's meat purchases were suspended along with Hammel's on October 21.

Film Impostor Trail May Take FBI to Florida

Fresh leads received yesterday on the man who called himself "Foster Smith" during a week of profitable check-passing and swindling of Washington's entertainment and business circles, may take police and the FBI to Coral Gables Fla., it was learned last night.

The impostor's true name and identity are known to a resident of the restort town, according to a communication now in the hands of authorities here; and are being withheld pending a check on this description of "Smith":

His limp is a result, not of a deformed left foot, but of an automobile accident in which his leg was broken;

He was formerly a "motion picture machine operator"—accounting possibly, for his extensive knowledge of the motion picture industry and the ease with which he convinced "contacts" of his authenticity as a Hollywood "talent scout" and "representative for Warner Brothers."

Also Collects Stamps

He is a motor boat and sailboat enthusiast;

And he talks frequently of his interest in stamp collecting.

A check of the baggage he left in the expensive Statler Hotel suite he occupied for almost a week before disappearing Sunday afternoon reveals that the one pair of shoes found among his clothing in no way indicates that one of his feet was deformed.

His effects are now being held by the FBI for fingerprint tests which may disclose his identity.

Meanwhile, recent reports placed the ambitious "Mr. Smith," alias David Walsh, alias Davis Ross, in Baltimore, where he is said to have continued his exploits immediately on the heels of his Washington escapades.

Indications yesterday at District police headquarters, where Detective Sergeants John Luskey and Dewey Guest are working on the case, were that the mystery of the swindler's identity and whereabouts will be solved this week. The management of the Statler Hotel was consulted several times during the day, and while no statement was issued, it was indicated that the fugitive can be found within the immediate vicinity of the Capital.

Funds For Lea

The House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission is seeking an additional appropriation of $75,000 to carry on its work. Enough money to complete its inquiry should certainly be granted. A careful study of the FCC is a prerequisite to any legislative changes Congress may make in the regulation of the communications industry. But there is one important step which the committee should take in order to give assurance that the money it seeks will be wisely and usefully expended. That step is to rid itself of its present general counsel, Eugene L. Garey.

Fifty-eight thousand dollars has already been spent to investigate the FCC. It is fair to say that this sum was largely wasted. It was wasted because of the star chamber tactics which Mr. Garey pursued. These tactics were permitted, and even encouraged, when the committee was under the chairmanship of Congressman Cox. The new chairman, Congressman Lea, has already made it clear that he will not tolerate procedures of this sort. He can best avoid them by securing a counsel who does not think of himself as a prosecutor. Mr. Garey has demonstrated an animus toward the FCC which wholly disqualifies him as an investigator. The House committee can do its important job far more effectively without him.

Italian Regency

Evidently the Italian politicians in the liberated sections of that country are coming to some agreement on the question of what should be done about the House of Savoy. The formula seems to be to insist on the abdication of King Victor Emmanuel and to ignore the claims of the heir apparent, Prince Umberto (both of whom bear the onus of their former associations with the Fascist regime), but to preserve the dynasty itself by the establishment of a regency for the King's grandson, the Prince of Naples, now 6 years old. As far as it goes, this formula appears more or less acceptable to all factions except the intransigeant republicans at the one extreme and the personal friends of the King at the other. Everything, of course, depends upon whether any regent acceptable to all the anti-Fascist or non-Fascist elements can be found. The names most frequently mentioned in this connection are those of Marshal Badoglio and the recently repatriated Count Carlo Sforza.

Now comes a dispatch by the indefatigable Mr. Herbert L. Matthews of The New York Times suggesting that the notion of naming Princess Marie Jose, wife of Umberto and mother of the boy prince, as regent is gaining much favor. Such a move would certainly strengthen the now precarious position of the dynasty. At the same time her nomination as regent would probably make a favorable enough impression in most of the Allied countries. Marie Jose, Princess of Piedmont, is the daughter of the late King Albert of the Belgians, who made a heroic figure in the previous war and who is still remembered affectionately in both Britain and the United States. She is thus the sister of King Leopold, who, since his surrender of his army in 1940, has stubbornly refused to collaborate with the conquerors and who is reported to be a closely watched prisoner in one of his own castles.

Thus the princess has intimate reasons for her personal dislike of Fascism, which has been pretty well known both inside and outside of Italy. Mr. Matthews, however, has revealed what was probably not previously known here, that her house in Rome was the center of internal opposition to Mussolini and his regime. It is quite possible that Umberto himself never had any particular love of the regime, but even his passive acceptance of it seems quite enough to render him an unsatisfactory ruler not merely in the sight of Italian liberals and democrats but also in the eyes of the Allied peoples who are still shedding blood in a war to destroy Fascism forever. Here, of course, enters the complication which may make the idea of a regency under Marie Jose untenable after all. It would seem that such a regency must necessarily involve some sort of separation between the parents of the young prince, who, by one of those ironies implicit in the monarchical system, would be confronted with what would seem a rather terrible choice between family interest and domestic happiness.

Meantime, the pressure on Marshal Badoglio for the creation of an ad interim government of responsible ministers increases and, according to Mr. Matthews, has now been taken up by the influential Signor Croce. From this distance, however, it is hard to see how such a government could exert much authority while the questions of the King's abdication and the future of the House of Savoy remain wholly undecided.

WLB's Comeback

The War Labor Board is making a heroic effort to recover the ground that was lost when Secretary Ickes negotiated an agreement with coal miners on strike. That is a commendable attitude. The board might have resigned when Mr. Ickes flouted the principles it had laid down. Instead it has decided to redress its lines and fight for wage stabilization in spite of the dangerous precedent set by the agreement with John L. Lewis. We think that this sensible and patriotic decision should command the warm support of the public and organized labor as well as that of other agencies of Government.

Chairman Davis was quick to correct the impression, gained largely from his report to Vice President Wallace and the board's approval of the coal settlement, that the WLB is now ready to give way to the increasing demands of labor for higher wages. The wage-stabilization program, he insists, has not been impaired. About this there is bound to be some questioning, but the main point is that the board is determined to repair whatever damage has been done. What Mr. Davis is pleading for is a closing of the ranks against the menace of inflation so that no further damage shall be done. Obviously the WLB cannot do the job alone. Its stamina and courage in taking the lead once more, in spite of the Ickes-Lewis agreement, should inspire other Government agencies to give their utmost to this cause.

Holding the line against inflation is only one segment of the board's problem. Another is holding the line against lawlessness. A week after the board had reluctantly accepted the Ickes-Lewis coup its public members wrote a formal opinion in an effort to reassert the principles which Mr. Ickes had disregarded. They are greatly disturbed by the fact that a Federal agency concluded a collective bargaining agreement with miners who had broken their no-strike pledge and were actually defying the Government at the time. So the board has reaffirmed its policy of "declining to treat with strikers." That is about as far as it can go in reasserting the dignity and prestige of the Government. It is clearly up to the President to make this principle binding upon any governmental agency which may hereafter be authorized to take over plants or mines to meet a labor crisis.

Likewise the WLB is deeply concerned by the fact that the United Mine Workers were able to reject the board's offer of June 18 and force an "alternative settlement" by cutting off war production. Remember, it says in effect, that the coal problem has not yet been solved. The present agreement will last only until the mines are returned to their owners. Then a new contract will have to be negotiated and approved by the WLB. If a study of the travel-time arrangement should indicate that it does not result in eight productive hours of work, the WLB hints that it might insist on adjustments that would not be favorable to the UMW. So the problem of forcing compliance with its orders may be squarely raised once more.

This must of necessity, the board says with indisputable logic, "bring into the forefront of consideration and discussion the whole question of the responsibility of unions for antisocial acts and of the capacity of Government as at present constituted to prevent such acts." In other words, "sanctions more thorough-going than now exist" may be needed to prevent John L. Lewis from sabotaging the war effort a fifth time. Coupled with the plea of the industry members of the board for legislation "to require responsibility of unions," this thoughtful forewarning should not be overlooked by Congress. If the WLB is to hold the line against lawlessness and wanton abuse of powers granted only to protect the rights of labor, it must have legislation befitting its own responsibilities. Now is the time to begin work on that problem. When the next crisis arises it will be too late.

Homeless Millions

The dimensions of the problem posed for the delegates to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Conference are clearly indicated in a set of statistics compiled in London from Allied sources. These statistics estimate the number of homeless or displaced persons scattered all over Europe. In all, they number upward of 21,500,000, and they are of practically every European nationality —Poles, Belgians, Czechs, Danes, Italians, Netherlanders, Greeks, Russians, Yugoslavs and others.

On the day of liberation, Europe will thus see the beginning of a migration which, unless regulated, controlled and directed, can have the most serious consequences. For all of these uprooted people will seek at the earliest possible opportunity and by every means available to return to their homes. It will not matter whether these homes are still in existence or not. They will move just the same. And large numbers of them will be the actual or potential carriers of disease which may produce widespread epidemics throughout the Continent.

It is therefore evident that the first task of the UNRRA Conference will be to agree on ways and means of providing immediate relief. Particularly there will be an instant call for food, medicine and clothing. In need of all three will be those whom the Germans have removed far from their homes and those who still inhabit their looted home territories. But side by side with this task of relief the United Nations must now begin to cope with the problem of rehabilitation. For the sooner farms and factories are put back into production, the sooner the liberated peoples will be able to take care of themselves.

In coping with this gigantic task we have learned valuable lessons from our experience in North Africa. Far from being a drain on our resources, North Africa is now providing food not only for its own people but also for our troops and at the same time piling up reserves for France in anticipation of that country's liberation from the Nazi yoke. Furthermore, as the task is tremendous, no one country is to be called upon to bear the burden alone. The problem is being considered as requiring solution through the action of all the United Nations and their associates. And this mutuality of effort should pay great dividends in the future not only in terms of lives saved but also in developing habits of cooperation.

Spanish Leopard

Apparently the Spanish leopard cannot change his spots. Recently the world began to note a disposition on the part of Generalissimo Francisco Franco to adjust himself and his regime to the changed circumstances of the times. It was noted, for instance, that Spanish leaders who used to speak of their country's "nonbelligerency" came to speak of Spain's "strict neutrality." And the Spanish press, which almost daily used to carry violent diatribes against the United States, had begun to change its tune.

That Franco's attitude is still the same as it ever was before—pro-Nazi, pro-Japanese, anti-Ally, anti-democratic—is clearly indicated by the gratuitous slap in the face he gave our side when he permitted his Foreign Minister, Count Francisco de Jordana, to send a message of congratulation—practically tantamount to diplomatic recognition—to Jose P. Laurel, head of the so-called "free and independent" regime set up in the islands by the Japanese militarists. At the same time, Franco's agents in Latin America, particularly in Argentina, continue to play the role of Hitler's agents and propagandists.

In the past there may have been some reason for the United States to coddle Franco, though this is problematical. There is certainly no reason to coddle him now. That is why it is to be hoped that the note of protest presumably sent by the State Department to Madrid protesting against the Franco government's message to Laurel had good, sharp teeth in it. The time is at hand for the United States to reexamine the hollow pretense that Spain under its present leadership is a "friendly" nation. Franco has done nothing to deserve that designation for his regime. He has, in fact, taken every opportunity to show that all his sympathies and inclinations are on the side of our enemies.

No Place For Politics

It is possible that generals make good politicians, but it is certain that politics makes bad generals. Some uncommon sense and candor was manifested on this score in the House the other day by Representative J. Percy Priest of Tennessee. "With mighty military operations designed to crush Hitlerism and Tojoism impending," he said, "it is most unfair to General Marshall and General MacArthur and to the millions of fighting Americans under their command to suggest that either of these great soldiers of the Republic in an hour like this would, for one second, give any consideration to relinquishing his post to engage in a political campaign."

Such suggestions can have been advanced only by irresponsible persons desirous of advancing their own ambitions, for it is certain that they were not encouraged or even sanctioned by either general. They do a grave disservice to the Army and to the Nation. If we begin to think of our military commanders as political candidates, we shall end by thinking of their military actions as politically motivated. Our confidence in them as soldiers would be destroyed. Great officers like Marshall and MacArthur will, of course, ignore the loose talk that has been circulated about them. The rest of us can best assist them by ignoring it, too. Let us associate them, at least until the fighting is over, exclusively with military campaigns.

RETURN: FIRST DAY

Now we thanked God that such a day became Part of ourselves—that winds and shades should tower
With hills along the light, the sun's bright flame
Filling with beauty each undying hour.
Beginning with the dawn that swept the trees,
We wanted much to hold them at our door—
The ways of streams, the clouds, all mysteries
Of fields in harvest: it was ours to store.

The sun rose on the earth and fell again
With intermittent flashes of the rain.
And we went down the street and heard the song
That was the world's own: ever in our hearts
We heard it sing and make the hours seem long;
And we thanked God again we played our parts.

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Story Of A Road

IN SPITE of warnings not to, we are beginning to think that the end of the war is not too far off. And with that thought comes realization that the war must be paid for. Already talk about how lend-lease and other outlays are going to be paid back is taking a prominent place in our press.

These questions will be injected again and again into the thinking of the American people on foreign policy. Already Administration critics have come back from quick turns through Latin America with pronouncements about taking the "boondoggling" and the "international WPA" element out of the good neighbor policy. There will be more of this when the presidential campaign grows hot.

Confused Thinking

Now confused thinking on foreign policy, whether for Latin America or anywhere else, is the one luxury that this Nation cannot afford to indulge in after this war, as we did after the last one. In Latin America particularly our margin for error is very, very small. Our worst mistakes there came from letting the dollar sign blot out our defense interests. This can happen again, especially if we get the idea that we have spent a lot of money there and got nothing in return.

The fact about our spending in Latin America is that very little has gone for projects that are not immediately and urgently tied up with winning the war. Since this means our survival, this is money spent on ourselves, even if it has gone into foreign hands. Most of it has gone into projects directly connected with getting out the strategic materials we must have. Some few programs have been set under way to relieve Latin-American countries in war-caused emergencies. Most of these have been handled through loans. We have made cash outlays for a very few, and for these we will get no money repayment.

This is the story of a road in Honduras that is being built with United States money. It will illustrate the point that no expenditure that we are making in Latin America can be singled out from the whole picture of what we are getting from Latin America and called "boondoggling." Just because we will not get a cash repayment does not mean that we will not be fully repaid.

Honduras, one of the small and weak Latin-American countries, in peacetime, lives chiefly by banana exports to the United States—exports on which United States companies collect the profit, by the way. Honduras also buys most of her imports from us. So she is normally a source of food supply and of two-way commercial profit for us.

After Pearl Harbor, the banana boats had to be used for war. The banana workers ate bananas for a while, but that couldn't go on. In mid-1942, unemployment in the north coast region became serious. Workers drifted inland, upsetting conditions in all Honduras.

Honduran Revenues

Honduran revenues come mainly from import taxes. But the ship shortage had cut imports to the bone. Government income went down as unemployment rose. Germany has been and still was very busy in the region. A serious situation was brewing.

At the Rios conference, all Latin America had agreed to turn to and get out war materials for us. We had agreed to help them weather the severe economic effects of war. Honduras was a plain case where help had to be offered. The fruit companies were making plans to convert to producing a badly needed material—manila hemp. But that took months. Meanwhile, people were beginning to starve.

After an American mission looked over the situation, it was agreed that the Honduran government would take care of one-third of the unemployed, the fruit companies a third and the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, a CIAA subsidiary, the rest. For its part, the institute undertook to rebuild a main road from the north region to the interior.

This 75-kilometer road has been building over a year now and will be finished in early 1944. Construction is costing a fraction of the cost per mile of the Inter-American pioneer road. About 1800 men are employed. Strict measures have had to be taken to protect the labor force from malaria. Something like a miracle was accomplished when regular distribution of atebrine reduced the percentage of malaria cases from 51 per cent to a little over 1 per cent in six months.

Building this road has not only kept Honduras on an even keel till hemp production can reabsorb the workers but is also giving the country a trunk road that is opening up a large area to future development.

What are we getting in return for the quarter of a million dollars spent there? We have lived up to our word given at Rio. We have kept political stability in the Canal region. We have tided Honduras over till she can swing into producing a war material we desperately need. We have made a permanent improvement that will increase the economic activity of a country that is profitable to us as an investment field and a customer.

If this is boondoggling, this writer would appreciate receiving a definition of realistic self-interest.

On Mutual Aid

By Barnet Nover

Contributions Of Lend-Lease

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S report on reverse lend-lease and the British White Paper on "mutual aid," issued simultaneously on Armistice Day, combine to show to what a remarkable degree the war has become a collective enterprise.

The determining fact is, of course, that there would have been no hope of victory for any of the Allies had they been forced to fight alone.

This is true of Great Britain even though the British did with magnificent gallantry and great fortitude hold the fort almost unaided for an entire year. It is true of Russia which, by all odds, has thus far made the greatest military contribution toward victory. It is also true of us.

IT WAS NOT until after the present combination had come into being, first as the result of the German attack on Russia in June, 1941, and then as a result of the Japanese assault on us six months later, that belief in an Allied victory could be more than an act of faith.

Indeed, eleven months were to elapse after the formation of the United Nations before the tide of battle definitely began to turn in our favor. And it would not have happened even then had it not been for the fact that the members of the Grand Coalition realized from the start that any contribution they could make to each other's fighting capacity was a form of self-help.

FOR THIS REASON it was no mere exercise in legislative rhetoric but a statement of literal truth to call the Lend-Lease Act which Congress approved in March, 1941, "An Act to Promote the Defense of the United States."

By helping Great Britain carry on her struggle against the Axis, by helping Russia and China and other nations who are now our Allies by furnishing them with arms, munitions, planes, tanks, food, facilities, we have insured our own safety since the aggressor powers menaced the security and independence not only of these nations but also of our own.

OUR CONTRIBUTION to the common cause has increased enormously since December 7, 1941. Our soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen have been fighting on a great many fronts, have delivered real blows to the enemies even though, in this particular, we are only at the beginning of our effort.

But, very wisely, we did not, on becoming a belligerent nation, cease being the arsenal of democracy. The output of our farms and factories, our mills and laboratories have not only enabled us to equip and supply our own forces but also to supply, in a measure, the forces of our Allies. In so doing we have helped hasten the day of ultimate victory and so saved American, as well as British, Russian, Chinese and other Allied lives.

IN THE LAST WAR a system of mutual aid also obtained. But that system was rooted in certain anachronistic habits of mind which were ultimately to produce an endless amount of trouble among the victors.

In those days we regarded the equipment and provisioning of our own forces as a legitimate charge on us, but not the equipment and provisioning of the forces of any of our Allies. The latter belonged in the category of commercial transactions for which we ultimately expected to be repaid even as we paid for the planes, tanks and artillery which we secured from our Allies for the needs of our troops.

In other words, an American shell fired by an American battery on the Western Front was to be paid for out of our own funds; an American shell fired by a British or French battery involved ultimate reimbursement by the London or Paris government to the United States.

THE STATE of mind which was responsible for the war-debts system has, unfortunately, not wholly disappeared even now.

For that reason the President's report and the British White Paper are both extremely useful documents. They show that lend-lease is no one-way street; that according to their ability the British are providing as much of what they quite accurately call "mutual aid" to us as we are providing lend-lease assistance to them.

This mutual aid takes innumerable forms: shipping, food and clothing for our troops, the construction of cantonments and airfields, railroad transportation, medical supplies, repair shops and a tremendous variety of services.

"Based upon estimates for the first six months of this year," says the President's report, "expenditures by the British Commonwealth for reverse lend-lease aid to the United States are now at an annual rate about $1,250,000,000." And this does not take into account "the anticipated export of raw materials, commodities, and foodstuffs for the account of the United States."

These figures regarded reverse lend-lease are important. The spirit is even more important. For what these figures show is that the members of the Grand Coalition realize they are fighting in a common cause against a desperate foe, that their combined efforts and resources will be necessary to achieve victory and that what is of benefit to one is of benefit to all.

If this same spirit is perpetuated and only then shall we win not only the war but the peace that is to follow the war.

Starving Children

A line in an editorial in your paper struck me with particular emphasis. "If we only spared them (the children of Europe) nothing more than the food which we waste from our overladen dinner tables we could grant them immeasurable relief."

When the Army of Occupation marched into Coblentz and had their first meal in old Fort Ehrenbeitstein across the Rhine, we came out, that first night, to find skinny-armed, pot-bellied, ravenous little creatures fighting like hungry wolves for the scraps which were being thrown into the garbage cans beside the door.

We members of the AFG were fed well. On that particular night the cooks of that outfit declared they had never fed a hungrier gang of "eaters" before nor since. For you see, each man at the sight which greeted him simply went back and fell into line again for "seconds" and the second time they came out those kids didn't have to fight and claw at each other for scraps out of the garbage cans.

Yes, if each and every one of your readers could have seen the sights we saw after the armistice there would be a lightening of these overladen tables you refer to.

Not Wasting Paper

In regard to a letter I wrote The Post in reference to waste paper in Bureau of Engraving and GPO, I have just had a good talk with both the director, Mr. Hall, and the assistant director, Mr. Long, at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. It seems that I was wrongfully informed about the disposal of the waste paper at the bureau, also at the GPO, and that my letter has caused quite a little annoyance. Mr. Hall and his assistant, Mr Long, both were fair and courteous, and gave me full information as to the disposal of all the waste paper from the Bureau of Engraving; also told me that the GPO was saving their waste just as carefully. I had no motive whatever in writing about this subject except for the purpose of helping the war effort. I was not alone in mistakenly thinking that this paper was destroyed, as there are hundreds of others working in the same place who had the same idea, and got it from what we thought a reliable source.

False Allegations

In the Sunday edition of The Washington Post of November 7 appeared an article by Mr. Drew Pearson wherein it was said that the Greek troops in the Middle East are receiving harsh treatment by the British military authorities and that, because of that, friction has developed to such an extent that the British made use of machine guns against one Greek contingent.

The Royal Greek Embassy is authorized to state that these allegations are false and without any foundation whatever.

Stabilization Program

Your editorial writer on subsidies and stabilization is apparently one of those chaps who likes to eat his cake and have it too. Today he suddenly discovered that "stabilization is now at sea." He apparently has not yet discovered that he helped get us there.

For months labor adhered to the wage stabilization program—despite rising prices—although it was conditioned both in law and in the President's statements upon stabilizing the cost of living.

During these months your editorial writer has preached against subsidies, for higher prices, and has done his best to discredit the subsidy price stabilization program. Now that he, and others like him, have convinced labor that living costs will not be stabilized, he seems distressed at the results of his own work!

In a most unfair manner, however, he tries to place the blame on those who have for months kept faith—despite terrific pressures—while he was undermining the stabilization program.

It is probably a waste of effort to call his attention to the fact that under the Canadian stabilization program the wages of all workers go up when the cost of living increases by a given percentage. Under the Canadian formula all workers in this country would have long ago received wage increases amounting to 5 per cent above the steel-wage formula.

Your paper is so often on the right side of public issues, that it is really distressing to see the subsidy and stabilization questions handled by a man who likes to close his eyes to many basic facts of life. A man, who, for example advocates higher consumer prices as a means of checking inflation—as if inflation were anything else than excessively high consumer prices!

EDITORIAL NOTE: We have not "preached" against subsidies, only against uncontrolled subsidies. We are in favor of subsidies properly budgeted and tied to a stabilization program which is firmly adhered to.

Men Of Vichy

Plot Their Escape

FRENCH UNDERGROUND newspapers which have just reached London report that Pierre Laval is planning to compliment British and American broadcasting by confiscating all radio sets in the possession of private citizens. He would hardly have planned so drastic a measure unless he considered propaganda broadcasts really dangerous for a population reduced to the bare necessities of life and deprived of almost all distractions is going to resent bitterly the loss of its radios.

Experience has shown that other measures than depriving the people of radios entirely do not prevent them from listening to foreign broadcasts. Even in Germany, where the government does not hesitate to impose the death penalty for this "crime," the B. B. C. still has its listeners.

In an attempt to soften the effect of the coming order, the underground Populaire reports, Laval has ordered the installation of loudspeakers in the streets throughout France, even in the smallest hamlets; and although equipment of this kind is extremely hard to procure, the work is going ahead rapidly, the Germans having provided the French with the necessary materials.

Confiscation of Radios

There are reports that similar installations of public loudspeakers have been made in Holland, with the same intention as in France—that of confiscating all private radios as soon as the public ones are ready to operate. The public loudspeakers, of course, will be tuned only to official stations.

One reason why the Germans agreed with Laval on the tremendous importance today of substituting official for foreign broadcasts is that they fear the day of invasion, when the Allies may be expected to give instruction to the population over the air. But the powerful French underground, which will direct whatever internal action is taken coincident with the landing, is not dependent on reports from owners of private radios for the maintenance of communications with the Allies. It will be in liaison with them when the invasion comes, and will play its predetermined part whatever Laval does about radios.

French collaborationists know very well that the underground will move at once on the day of invasion, and they anticipate that the first act will be their own arrests. They are therefore preparing to get out fast, and are opening ways of retreat to Switzerland, Spain and Portugal. Which country they pick depends upon which party of collaborationists they belong to.

Collaborationist Group

There are, roughly speaking, two groups of collaborationists in France. One is grouped behind Laval, the other behind Petain, whom they brought into power, and have used as a cloak ever since. The Lavalists include Fernand de Brinon, prewar founder of the France-Germany committee; Adrien Marquet, Mayor of Bordeaux; Marcel Deat, editor of the Oeuvre, who wrote the famous "Why Die for Danzig?" editorial just before the war. The Petainists have among their number Paul Baudoin, Petain's first Foreign Minister; Benoit-Mechin, a former Petain cabinet member who was recently arrested by Laval, and Jacques Doriot, former Communist now Fascist leader.

The Laval group is planning to run to Switzerland. Fernand de Grinon has made several trips lately between France and Switzerland, presumably for the purpose of transferring assets from one country to the other. Laval is believed to have made heavy deposits recently in Swiss banks, although ordinary citizens are not allowed to export funds. He is also reported to have purchased real estate in Switzerland, and to be negotiating the sale of his 60-kilowatt radio station in Lyons—for foreign exchange.

The Petainists prefer to take refuge in Spain and Portugal. Jacues Guerard, former office manager for Baudoin, is now Vichy's Ambassador in Lisbon, where he is taking care of the interests of his friends. Portugal has liberal foreign exchange laws, and the banks behind the Petainists, especially the Banque Worms, are reported to have sent some of their ablest negotiators to Lisbon recently.

From one point of view, the difference between the Lavalists and Petainists could be described as a competition between two groups of banks. The Worms Bank, and its associates in French heavy industry, have been engaged chiefly in gaining apparently legal control of French industry and economy for the Franco-German group in which they are members. Behind Laval was the Banque National de Commerce et Industrie. Today, the BNCI is able to help Laval and Company to feather their probably future nests in Switzerland while the Worms Bank provides the same service for the Petain collaborationists in Portugal and Spain.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Pessimism As A Profession

THE OTHER DAY I heard a man say that something or other depended on "whether you take an optimistic or a realistic view of the situation." Now I happen to know that in 1940 he predicted as a realist that Britain would fall, in 1941 and 1942 that Russia would be knocked out of the war, and in 1943 that Russia would make a separate peace with Germany. Yet he is still functioning as a professional realist. He will, I suppose, go on functioning. For if a man says that something terrible is going to happen, and it does not happen, we are all so relieved that our pleasure hides his error. But if he predicts something pleasant and it does not happen, we have to take our disappointment out on someone, and there he is sitting on the end of a limb.

LIPPMANN

That is why in Washington realism has become another name for pessimism. There is safety in pessimism whereas to have faith is to take risks.

NOW IT HAS been the fashion to say that the war is frightful but just wait until peace breaks out. Perhaps so. But I think we may risk the belief that the problems of peace, however hard and complicated, will not be nearly so terrifying—when we face up to them in a practical and factual way—as they seem when we speculate about them with little knowledge and much theory. But they will also be different problems than we imagined they would be before we really examined them.

CONSIDER, FOR example, how in regard to the relief of the liberated countries of Europe an examination of the realities affects our preconceived notions. We now have the agreed figures of the needs of the eight European countries which are to be liberated. They need in the first six months, which are the critical months, to get about half their imports from places which can be reached only by using ships. It comes to a total of somewhat more than 23 million tons of goods.

But note then that France, Belgo-Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and Norway—the four occupied countries of western Europe—will need two-thirds of this total, and remember then that these four countries will emerge from the war with very substantial financial resources. They will not need and will not ask for charity. What they need and will ask for is the right to buy with their own funds the things their people want. Their "relief" problem is not a relief problem at all from our point of view. It is a problem of allocating the world supply of goods, which is temporarily short of the demand, so as to prevent a disorderly inflation of world prices. For if France, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Norway start bidding, each for itself and each against all the others and against the British, the Russians, and ourselves, there will be economic chaos everywhere.

THIS MATTER OF FACT, and genuinely realistic, approach, will clarify many other questions which are now very confused and tangled by bad information and bad theory. For example, our relations with the French National Committee. The doctrinaire official view has been that until France has been liberated, and until elections have been held, no authority exists which can exercise French sovereignty. But if France is to use her large financial resources, which are now frozen, in order to pay her own way, we are not going to be able to wait until all of France is liberated, all her war prisoners are returned, all the paraphernalia of national elections and a new Parliament have been provided for.

In short, we are going to have to recognize the French National Committee as being something very like a provisional government. We can call it something else if words worry us. But the fact is that no matter what we call it, in practice the Committee will have to make commitments and enter into financial, military, and political agreements which only governments can make.

Soldiers and Public Warned Not to Expect Early Victory

Reds Still 1000 Miles From Berlin, Briscoe Declares

Fort Knox, Ky., Nov. 12 (AP).—In a statement issued today to be read by all officers, enlisted men and civilian employes at this home of the armored command, Col. N. Butler Briscoe, post commander of Fort Knox, said all their personal plans should be made on a long-range basis because "the war is not going to stop soon."

He said it must be remembered that "both of the nations with whom we are at war have had the populace thoroughly educated up to this present war and that the people have been incited to a fanatical fervor by promises and untruths.

"A war ends only when the will of the people to resist has been broken. The defeat of an army the loss of a navy, or of an air force does not necessarily end a war, since the people of the country may still build and organize new forces. This will to resist must be broken, not just suspended, as was the case in 1918," he added.

Fear or Anger?

The colonel said the German war effort will be seriously crippled by bombing, but that "it remains to be seen whether the will of the people of Germany to resist will be increased by anger at the bombings or decreased by fear of the bombings."

"And we are not even in bombing range of Japan," he continued.

Blaming newspapers and radio announcers for current talk about the war ending soon, Colonel Briscoe said daily news stories of battle successes often are "poured out to the people in a misleading fashion." He said this could be corrected by telling the rate of advance and emphasizing the distance to be traveled.

The commandant said he thought it necessary "to call the facts to your attention" because "misleading good news causes a reduction of effort and leads to absenteeism and dawdling. The continuance of pressure is essential."

Wars Come and Go

He concluded his memorandum by saying: "You should not let panic rush you into sales, contracts or agreements based on needs or desires of the moment, nor let fear of the future prevent you from carrying out your permanent plan. There have been many wars, and when this one is over there may be others. Wars come and go and come and go again.

. . . In viewing the battle successes one should keep track of the rate of advance and the distance to be traveled. A man walking from New York to San Francisco is within 2000 miles of San Francisco when he reaches Kansas City but he still has some distance to go.

Nazi Advance Was Swift

"In 1914 the German army, opposed by fresh, well-trained, well-equipped French, British and Belgian armies of high morale and ready for war, advanced at the astonishing rate of 14 miles a day. This advance was finally stopped. It took up a defensive line on the soil of France where it stayed for four years.

"In 1943 the German army is fighting in Russia, on Russian soil, a thousand miles from Berlin and is being driven back just now at the stupendous rate of 9 miles a day. In the South Pacific our troops are advancing and capturing jungles from the Japanese in fighting where the gains are made often by inches, but this fighting is 2000 miles from Tokyo.

Germans Stronger Now Than in 1939, General Strong Asserts

By the Associated Press

Army intelligence, firing a set of figures at optimism, said yesterday that Germany and Japan are still so strong, so well stocked and situated, that if we take things too easy "we may find that our opportunity for victory" has vanished.

In fact, said General George V. Strong, acting chief of the military intelligence division, in a report released on Capitol Hill, the Germans are stronger now than in 1939 and the real fight against the Japanese is only starting.

"Our main advantage in the struggle is our ability to produce weapons," he said. "If, through unwillingness to face facts, we give up this advantage, if through overoptimism we slow down production and relax our efforts, we may find that our opportunity for victory has escaped us permanently."

Given In Secret Session

Strong's review, stacking up point by point the things still blocking the roads to Berlin and Tokyo, previously had been given to House members in secret session.

It presented the same danger-in-relaxing case he argued last September before a conference of industrial and labor leaders and newspaper executives, and its release anew and in detail, gave emphasis through repetition.

Starting with Germany, here is what Strong emphasized, on the basis of reports to military intelligence officers:

Fighting manpower—The Nazis have more than 300 well trained divisions. (At full strength this would mean 4,500,000 men.) Russia is keeping three-fourths of Hitler's army busy.

35,000,000 in War Work

Production manpower and womanpower — Employment in the Reich's essential war industries stands at 35 million now as compared with 23 million in 1939.

Food—Supplies are far better than in the last war.

New weapons—German inventiveness has turned up many new models of tanks, self-propelled guns, rocket guns and some other equipment better than the Allies.

Oil—Stocks have decreased but Germany can lay hands on more than enough. The Ploesti raid was a severe, but not fatal blow.

Other important fields—An excellent position on steel, heavy output of coal, and rubber production soon to meet almost all needs for 202,000 tons of synthetic a year.

Air Force Weakest Link

General Strong named the German air force as the weakest link in Hitler's chain about Europe, but even here he cautioned that aircraft production gained 25 per cent during the first half of 1943 and that while losses since July have exceeded the rate of production, the heavy attrition rate will have to be maintained.

And he added that while Hamburg has been virtually eliminated and the Ruhr Valley production was decreased by 30 per cent last May and June, German dispersal of industry means that bombing attacks must be continued and even extended.

The submarine menace cannot be forgotten, Strong went on, because new or modified undersea raiders may once again play havoc with our long supply lines.

He was not any more cheered up by the Japanese situation, summarizing it:

The Japanese fleet is still in being, we have yet to reach any main line of resistance, geography is all in the enemy's favor, his morale is good and there are sufficient supplies of all but a few commodities to carry on a long war.

He found one good thing: Due to Allied attrition Japan's shipping situation is getting worse.

House Fight Seen on Proposal To Increase U. S. Postal Rates

By Samuel W. Bell

New York Herald-Tribune Bureau

A fight on the proposal of the House Ways and Means Committee to include drastic increases in postal rates as a revenue raising device in the $2,143,000,000 tax bill was projected definitely yesterday as gathering opposition to this and other proposals forced the Democratic leadership to postpone consideration of the tax bill until November 22.

Representative Fred A. Hartley of New Jersey, ranking Republican member of the House Postoffice Committee, said he was "surprised and disappointed" that the Ways and Means Committee had ignored the "protest" of the Postoffice Committee against "trespassing on the prerogatives" of that group. He insisted that the House "leave this legislation in the hands of a committee better equipped to handle the complicated question of postal rates."

Hartley was a member of the Postoffice Subcommittee which appeared before the Ways and Means Committee this week to urge reference of the postal rate increases to the proper committee. Subsequently, the Ways and Means, by the narrow margin of one vote, defeated a motion to take postal rates out of the tax bill pending a study by the Postal Committee.

Hartley said he hoped the Ways and Means Committee would see the wisdom of permitting amendments on the House floor in connection with the tax bill "so that this section covering postal rates can be stricken out." Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has announced that he will seek a special rule of procedure on the tax bill. Presumably this would be of the "gag" variety usually sought by the tax-making committee, unless Speaker Sam Rayburn puts his foot down on it as he did in the case of the pay-as-you-go tax collection bill last spring.

Meanwhile, opposition to any "gag" on the tax bill came from within the Democratic membership of the Ways and Means Committee Representative James P. McGranery of Pennsylvania said he would resist a "gag" rule so that the House could vote at least on the committee's proposal to double the admission tax now assessed at 1 cent for each 10 cents.

[Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York was reported by the Associated Press to have indicated he would oppose the committee's boost in the excise on liquor from $6 to $9 a gallon. He contended the increase would return "bootlegging and hijacking."—Editor's note.]

The decision to hold the tax bill over until the week beginning November 22, announced by Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, also indicated collapse of the reported maneuver whereby the tax bill would be shoved ahead of the forthcoming food subsidy battle. This is scheduled to be launched Thursday on a bill to continue the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which carries a ban against future subsidies written into the measure by the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Winant Already Knew Son Was Safe

Ambassador John G. Winant knew two days ago that his son, shot down with his Flying Fortress "Tech Supply" on the October 10 raid on Muenster, Germany, was safe in a German prison camp but he kept the secret until the formal War Department notification was received yesterday, it was announced last night.

Mrs. Winant, who returned to the United States from London recently, was notified there that her son, John G. Winant, jr., was safe.

As messages of congratulations poured into the Embassy yesterday, another message from Bern, Switzerland, said that the Swedish representative of the international YMCA had talked with young Winant last week at a German prison camp and found him in good health and spirits.

Meanwhile, reports from a U. S. bomber base in England indicated that Winant's flying mates and the crewmen who serviced his Flying Fortress were overjoyed to learn of his safety.

Sergt. William Smith of Washington, a mechanic, said he had given Winant up for dead, as he commented, "It's good news, very good." He added, "he and his crew were a swell bunch."

The American aircraft carrier task force which struck enemy warships at Rabaul so successfully November 5, it was announced, was commanded by Rear Admiral Frederick C. Sherman.

Reporting on the antisubmarine battle in the Atlantic, Knox said that of the 60 German U-boats destroyed in August, September and October, 27 were sunk by American forces and the remainder by British and Canadian units.

Praising Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, Atlantic Fleet commander, for the success of our antisub forces, Knox said 21 of the 27 U-boats destroyed by his command were accounted for by carrier-based airplanes. The remainder were sunk as follows: Two by destroyers, one by long-range naval patrol planes, one by a surface ship-carrier plane team, one by Army aircraft and one by a combined Army-Navy air team.

Public Favors Piecework in War Plants But Labor Leaders Firmly Oppose Idea

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 12.—Whatever the phase "incentive pay" may mean to the industrial engineer, or labor expert, to the average American it means piecework—and he is inclined to think it would be a good idea to put all war industries on this basis.

While plans for incentive pay have been given much thought in Washington the issue is likely to become of increasing importance as the pinch of manpower shortages becomes even more acute in vital war industries.

General public attitude toward piecework in war plants is favorable, despite the staunch opposition of labor leaders. To measure this attitude, field reporters asked:

"In some plants, workers are paid on a piecework basis, that is they are paid for what they actually turn out, and not on an hourly or daily basis. Would you favor or oppose putting such a plan into operation in all war plants in this country?"

Favor	54%
Oppose	33
Undecided	13

If, however, the vote on this issue were confined to employed persons alone (that is, all full time, paid workers) support would be more evenly divided, as the figures below indicate:

Employed Persons Only

Favor	46%
Oppose	42
Undecided	12

Another question asked brought out the fact that while war workers themselves favor a proposal for incentive pay, based on total output, they resist the idea, by a small majority, of having it take the form of piecework.

Advocates of such a plan have pointed to the fact that Russian war production, which has surprised the world—including Germany—is based on a system of piecework. The majority of average Americans who support it for this country believe it would result in increased production and would introduce a more equitable wage distribution. On the other hand, those who oppose it in this survey argued most frequently that it would result in production of inferior quality; that it would inflict a form of "speed-up" on the worker to the detriment of his health, and that it would tend to destroy the union system.

D. C. Flight Officer Cited for Service On 50 Missions

Lieut. Richard A. Grant, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman R. Grant, 4209 46th st. nw., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for participation in 50 operational flight missions in the southwest Pacific area, it was announced yesterday.

"The operations in which he took part consisted of dropping supplies and transporting troops to advance positions," the citation said. "The flights involved flying at low altitudes over mountainous terrain under adverse weather conditions in a transport plane and often necessitated landing within a few miles of enemy bases."

Lieutenant Grant graduated from Roosevelt High School here and was a clerk in the main postoffice before he joined the air forces in March of 1942. He was sent overseas last July.

Plans for Compulsory Saving Get Increasing Attention

By W. W. Cumberland

Proposals for compulsory savings are receiving increasing attention as a part of our program of war finance. Even the term "compulsory savings" suggests that the concept requires careful analysis, and must be rejected unless a strong affirmative case can be made, since the basic idea is in conflict with one of the major objectives for which the war is being fought.

Postponement of the real cost of the war is impossible. That cost consists in the lives of our fighting forces which are lost, in the human efforts which are devoted to purposes of destruction, rather than those of human welfare, and in the raw materials and natural resources which are destroyed.

Since the immediate economic cost of the war must be met from current income, and since only a small proportion of war activities results in an increase of national assets, such as new factories which will be useful in time of peace, the presumptive case is clear that the financial as well as the real costs should also be met from current income. This is true because borrowing should only be employed when assets created by use of borrowed funds are equivalent to the liabilities which are contracted in obtaining the loans. Obviously, this does not occur in connection with borrowing for war purposes.

War expenditures are imperious in their nature, and they increase in fantastic proportions. Hence it is impossible for a tax system to be devised and imposed, and for the resulting revenues to flow into the Treasury, with as great rapidity as the increase in war costs. So there is no escape from deficits, and sound financial policy is merely directed toward keeping the deficits as small as possible. One method has been to put individual income taxes on a current basis. Another method would be to avoid unnecessary expenditures.

Four Alternatives

Not only does private saving have financed? Four alternatives are available, namely, voluntary loans from the savings of individuals, compulsory loans, borrowing from commercial banks and printing paper money. Of course, voluntary savings and voluntary loans from private citizens in an amount to cover war deficits are to be preferred among these alternatives. Not only does private saving have a proportionate effect in removing the inflationary influence of increased payrolls due to war demands, but the individuals concerned increase their stake in their own country, and become increasingly more responsible citizens. They also accumulate reserves which keep them from being dependent upon charity or upon Government relief when the war is ended.

However, experience demonstrates that many beneficiaries of war activities save little or nothing, and other savers do not see fit to purchase Federal bonds. This latter attitude is encouraged during the present war by the fact that the Treasury has been unwilling to offer to the public those interest rates and other conditions which would induce a full flow of saving and investment. As long as this policy prevails, there is no likelihood that more than a minor fraction of war deficits can be covered by sales of Federal bonds to the public.

Improvident Must Pay

Even under the most favorable circumstances, however, bonds will not be purchased by the public in close ratio with individual incomes or incomes of consumer units. Thus in the postwar period those who have been provident will have claims for interest against the Federal Government, whereas those who have been improvident will have to pay taxes to provide interest payments to the thrifty.

And since the improvident tend to outnumber the thrifty, serious political complications may arise, particularly if the war continues until the Federal debt requires interest payments in an amount which may well correspond to total Federal expenditures during the thirties, and may be two or three times as large as total Federal expenditures in the twenties.

Thereupon demagogues will undoubtedly propose that the Federal debt be repudiated, that interest rates be arbitrarily reduced to nominal amounts or that payment be made in printing-press money. In any of these cases the reward for present thrift and patriotism will be subsequent spoliation.

Part of this danger could be avoided by resorting to compulsory savings. But no system of compulsory savings has yet been proposed which would correlate required savings with the individual situation of each income receiver. While the irresponsible and unpatriotic might be compelled to carry part of the financial burden of the war, it would be difficult to correlate compulsory savings with those increases in individual income which not only represent the principal ability to save but also constitute the principal danger of inflation.

Savings Might Disappear

Another difficulty is that voluntary savings would decline, and perhaps disappear, if a compulsory system were introduced. Third, if taxes are subordinated to savings, whether voluntary or forced, as the principal means of financing the war, members of the armed forces will not hold their proportionate share of Government bonds, but will later carry their full share of the debt load. Fourth, compulsory savings, the negation of individual liberty and individual responsibility. At best, it is a device which may be justifiable in time of war, but should be abandoned as promptly as possible. In fact it is so questionable a device that it should not be adopted until the full possibilities of paying for the war currently from taxation and voluntary loans from the public have been exhausted.

Sight should not be lost of the fact that not a single dollar could be collected by the Government as forced savings which could not be obtained by taxation. But taxes have the advantage of avoiding the creation of public debt, whereas forced savings create problems of interest payments which extend into the indefinite future and also of possible future maldistribution of national income.

On the other hand, if it were possible to construct a system of forced savings which would be equitable in all individual cases, this would assure greater equality of sacrifice in financing the war than is at present the case. Another practical advantage in favor of forced savings is that legislative bodies in democratic countries can levy taxes only to the extent that is tolerated by public opinion.

Are Really Illusory

In all probability the public would be willing to relinquish a larger fraction of current income in the form of so-called savings, than would be borne in the form of taxes. Actually, of course, the savings are illusory, since by definition they are dissipated for the destructive purposes of war.

Centralization of government, with corresponding diminution of individual responsibility, has characterized recent years in American life. Executive orders, directives and bureaucratic pronouncements have gone far in replacing laws. They have also undermined the practice of the citizen in doing his own thinking and in being responsible for his own activities.

Adoption of a system of forced savings would be another step in the same direction. If it were not abandoned at the end of the war, it would mean that the state would have virtual control of the economic life of the citizen, since the state, rather than the citizen, would decide how much should be saved and how the savings should be employed.

Must Be Met Today

To summarize, the real cost of the war must be met today, and only the bookkeeping can be postponed in the form of Federal debt. Taxes should be employed so as to pay for the war now, to the greatest extent that is possible. Borrowing should be maintained at a minimum, and Federal securities should be offered to the public on a voluntary basis, and in sufficiently attractive form to induce large investments in Government bonds.

Only to the extent that well-devised systems of taxation and voluntary borrowing from the public are inadequate should resort be made to compulsory savings, and this device should be strictly limited to the war period.

The best case that can be made for compulsory savings is that this type of financial policy would be preferable to financing deficits by resorting to the commercial banks or to the issuance of unsecured paper money.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The customers always write, and they wrote in some profusion this week after we took Jim Thorpe as our topic. They echo the acclaim for Thorpe as the NO. 1 football player of all time, reviving their own memories of the big Indian and his exploits.

POVICH

There is applause, too, though, for Harry Costello, the old Georgetowner who played against Thorpe in the heydey of the Carlisle Indians, and then played with and against the big Indian for 10 years in the ragmuffin era of pro football.

"I read with a great deal of interest your article concerning Harry Costello's statements about Thorpe as a football player," writes Attorney Robert E. Acorn, "and I heartily agree. I have seen Thorpe and I have seen Nurmi. To me most of the others are just some football players and runners.: I am writing to you merely to say a word about another great football player, and that man is Harry Costello.

"Carlisle was playing Georgetown on the latter's field back in 1911 or 1912. Thorpe would get back in semikick formation. start off toward right end, then cut sharply through right tackle and be gone. My memory is that Costello, who was the Georgetown safety man, caught Thorpe six times in an open field."

That was the greatest exhibition of tackling that any man ever gave, opines Mr. Acorn, and he goes on to say, "incidentally Costello in those days didn't weigh more than 145 pounds, dripping wet. Notwithstanding his lack of weight, he could take it, as witness his days in pro football when that game was roughness first and then football.

"Costello could do everything on a football field. If my memory serves correctly, he beat Virginia one year by himself by drop-kicking 12 points. I doubt if Georgetown ever had a better broken field runner, Jack Flavin and all the rest included. Costello could also hit a line and was a fine field general.

"In the Ivy League in those days, Costello would have been an All-American or, as they say in these days, All-America. In my book, if 11 men of all time were picked to play a game, he would be quarterback. Paranthetically, he is the only football announcer to whom I will listen avidly. When he is on the air at a football game, it is possible to follow the game intelligently and to visualize it without having to listen to a lot of extraneous conversation.'"

And from a former Georgetown captain comes this:

"Harry Costello's statement regarding Jim Thorpe sounds grand to me. No question about Thorpe's ability. However, some time when you aren't too busy, look up the record of my team against Thorpe when he was captain of Carlisle and I was captain at Georgetown.

"Costello stated that Thorpe couldn't be stopped. Well, in the last half of that Georgetown-Carlisle game, Thorpe never made a first down. We scored 18 points in the last half and the Indians scored nothing. It was such a tough battle in the second half that it required all the cleverness of Referee Fred Murphy to hold the game in hand. Coach Pop Warner was removed from the bench for the first time in his life when Murphy found him tipping off Gus Welch on what plays the Indians should use.

"In that game, Harry Costello was great. He tackled Thorpe three times in an open field.

"You fail to make mention of Benny Boynton, the great Williams quarterback on Walter Camp's last All-American team. He played for me when I first introduced professional football to Washington. We paid him $125 and expenses from New York for each game. I consider Benny Boynton perhaps the greatest football player I ever saw. He could do everything Thorpe did. Kick, block, pass and run. He shouldn't be overlooked in the list of great players."

Costello relates a Jim Thorpe anecdote we hadn't caught up with before. He tells of the years at Canton when he and Thorpe were playing with the pro champions and one wealthy Canton fan, suffused with admiration for the team, offered to give $100 to the player who scored each touchdown in a certain game.

This offer was posted in the Canton dressing room. Costello, an early arrival that day, read it with interest. Thorpe didn't see it. Canton ran up a big score that day. With Thorpe running the ball, they were always pounding at the goal line. His big gains had them in scoring position continually. In the next huddle, the other Canton backs would say, "Nice going, Jim, but you're tired. We'll take it over."

On the train that night it leaked out. Thorpe learned what had been going on and found Costello, turned him upside down and shook every dollar of the gift money out of him. "The big Indian took all my dough," says Costello, "and then tells me, 'Now you and Jim even'."

N'western Primed to Upset Irish

By Charles Dunkley

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 12 (AP).—Chapter eight in the story of the greatest Notre Dame football team since Knute Rockne's undefeated and untied eleven of 1930 will be written before a sellout crowd of 48,500 tomorrow when the undefeated and untied Irish play Northwestern—a team geared to the highest possible degree for an upset.

Notre Dame's seven victims this season will say it can't be done, and even the odds-makers like the Irish by 20 or 21 points—but that itself is a tribute to these Northwestern Wildcats, who have lost only one game all season and have one of football's finest passers and all-around players in halfback Otto Graham.

Most Against Ga. Tech

The smallest number of points to which the Irish have been limited in charging to the position of the Nation's No. 1 team is the 26 which they rolled up on a great Army eleven last Saturday. The most any team has scored on Notre Dame is 13—by Georgia Tech, against whom the Irish amassed their highest scoring total, 55 points.

Notre Dame can go without Angelo Bertelli, the new marine. Coach Frank Leahy knows that now, after the splendid way in which 18-year-old Johnny Lujack conducted himself against Army last week. With Bertelli in the slot on the "T" formation, Notre Dame mauled Pitt, Georgia Tech, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Navy. With Lujack, the Irish battered Army. They have to win this game with Northwestern and two more, with the Iowa Seahawks and Great Lakes, to finish the season with a perfect record.

Entirely on Graham

While the Irish have four great backs in Lujack, Creighton Miller, Julius Rykovich and Jim Mello, and fine replacements, Northwestern must rely almost entirely on Graham's passing arm, which hardly assures the Wildcats of a close score, let alone a victory.

But if the durable Otto goes like he did against a weak Wisconsin team last week, when he scored four touchdowns, passed for a fifth and kicked three extra points, the Wildcats can make a game of it. The catch is, Wisconsin's line scarcely compares with Notre Dame's magnificent wall—and that is expected to keep the Irish victory string going.

Ex-Vol Back May Oppose Lions Sunday

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

George Cafego, who was known as "Bad News" through two All-American years at Tennessee because he was just that to all opponents, was purchased by the Redskins yesterday from the Brooklyn Dodgers in a straight cash deal.

CAFEGO

Cafego reported here yesterday, was pronounced physically fit by Dr. Robert Moran and worked out with the team late in the afternoon. He is eligible to play tomorrow against the Detroit Lions in Griffith Stadium, but will probably be used only on defense, if at all, as it will take some time for him to learn the Redskin plays and signals.

Cafego's purchase gives the Redskins their only triple-threat back of the 10 now on the squad and brings the roster up to the league maximum of 28 players. The 5-foot-11, 173-pound tailback, 28 years old, has played seven games with the Dodgers to date.

Has Army Discharge

After graduating from Tennessee in 1939, Cafego played the 1940 season with the Dodgers and played a prominent part in Brooklyn's 16-14 victory over the Redskins in Ebbets Field. He entered the Army the following year and served nearly two years before he received an honorable medical discharge. Cafego played with the Eastern Army All-Stars last year.

Although he will hardly break into the starting backfield of Ray Hare, Sammy Baugh, Wilbur Moore and Andy Farkas, Cafego will be a valuable replacement and will alternate with Bob Seymour in giving the starting quartet much-needed rest in five consecutive tough ball games facing the Redskins.

Cafego's name appears twice in the list of National Football League statistical leaders. The former Tennessee back ranks ninth in the league in passing, having completed 17 of 36 for 209 yards. As safety man for the Dodgers he has returned five free kickoffs for an average of 21 yards each.

Will Be Eligible

Having lost six of seven games and with only three to play, Brooklyn finally accepted the last of a number of Redskin offers for Cafego. If the Redskins win the Eastern championship, as expected, Cafego will be eligible for the championship playoff.

Coach Dutch Bergman was pleased with the acquisition of an experienced, dependable back and the announcement brought the first smile of the day to the Redskin mentor who is knee-deep in worries over the invasion of the Lions, coached by his former coach and good friend of 30-odd years, Gus Dorais.

In going over Detroit's record of three victories, four defeats and a tie, Bergman pointed out all four defeats were at the hands of the Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers, and in the first Bear game the score was 27 to 21.

Lions Have Good Guards

Bergman has learned from scout reports on the Lions to beware of an excellent collection of guards and ends, led by Georgetown's former All-American, Augie Lio. Two rookies, Toney Rubino of Wake Forest and Riley Matheson of Texas Mines' have been playing excellent ball at their guard posts. At end the Lions have veteran Bill Fisk as a defensive standout and John Hightower, with Cleveland last year as the pass catching threat.

Detroit mixes its attack with Charlie Fenenbock and Ned Mathews, a pair of U. C. L. A. products sharing the load with fireball Frankie Sinkwich. Bergman has the utmost respect for Sinkwich's talents and has repeatedly drilled into the Redskins the fact that Sinkwich, although in his first year, is equally good whether passing, running or kicking and can make way with the ball game at any time.

Wilson Tigers Win; G. W. Beats Western

Anacostia Loses At Tenleytown By 12-to-0 Score

By virtue of Coolidge's defeat of Roosevelt Friday night Wilson moved up to second place. The Tigers have won four, tied one and lost two, while Roosevelt now has four victories and two defeats.

"Flea" Flaherty was in the thick of it for Anacostia and made several of his passes good, but the larger Wilson men swarmed over the Anacostia line, which had few reserves and tired quickly Left Guard Gordon O'Neill was the standout of the Wilson defense, making more tackles than any other two men.

The Tigers' first score came in the second quarter when Bill Haycock threw a long and beautiful pass from the 35 to Russell Keith in the end zone. The second march started on the Anacostia 40, with a 5-yard dash by Keith on a reverse from Stewart Brown. Then Brown heaved a long one to Bob Henry on the 15, and after line bucks to the 12, Brown took it over in an off tackle play.

The Anacostia Flatsmen began a sustained drive from their own 5-yard line in the second period, moving to the Wilson 40 before one of Flaherty's passes was intercepted. They came back for another in the third period, with Flaherty working the spread for a couple of long gains to the 10, but they lost it there on downs, just a foot short of a first down.

Clipping Penalty Calls Back Raiders' Third Touchdown

A Western player allegedly indulged in a bit of clipping in the game with George Washington High at Alexandria yesterday and the Raiders were clipped out of a ball game. Dick Ballard had scooped up a GW kick and run 90 yards with it for a touchdown when the score was nullified by the clipping penalty. That meant the Presidents won, 14-13.

Aside from the assist by the officials, it was Campbell"s educated toe that made the difference. He kicked both points after the GW touchdowns, while one of Western's was blocked.

The Presidents took the role of nip at the start of the game, while Western played tuck, and it went along that way throughout. Rusty Doran's men got tricky after four minutes of play and a triple reverse ended in a pass from Boteler to Hensley 38 yards across the goal. Then Campbell turned his first conversion trick.

Raiders Tie Things Up

Late that period, Western tied up the ball game. The Raiders made three first downs running, moving to the 5-yard line, where Ballard threw a 9-yard pass over the goal to Alexander. It was a blocked punt that set up the second Western score in the third period. The blocked ball bounded to the GW 19 and a Western player fell on it. After a short gain running, Ballard passed to Rannie Bishop, 15 yards, and it was over.

It was another long one—25 yards this time—from Boteler to Hensley that tied the score and Campbell's second kick put the Presidents ahead. Then, with two minutes left to play in the last period, Ballard took Kirby's punt on his own 10 and ran the length of the field. But the officials called it back because of the clip.

Fairfax Routed By Little Generals

Washington-Lee High School's Little Generals gave a lighter eleven from Fairfax High School a sound trouncing at Ballston, Va., yesterday. The score was 60-0.

The first of nine touchdowns came when Alan Cummings fumbled behind his own goal line. Jack Pumphrey recovered for the score. Two of them were the result of Fairfax kicks blocked in their own territory. Two others came after the Generals had intercepted passes in Fairfax territory.

The longest pass of the game was Billy Earl's 35-yard pitch in the third quarter. Pumphrey took it on the Fairfax 40 and scored his second touchdown.

Landon Bows To St. Alban's

"Cotton" Smith reversed the procedure yesterday, hurling touchdown passes instead of personally scoring the markers as St. Alban's turned back a fighting Landon Prep eleven 12-7 at St. Alban's field.

Landon forged to a 7-0 first period lead when Sager culminated a 58-yard march by diving over from 2 yards out. Leachman added the point. But in the second period, Smith tossed a 10-yarder to Seal for one tally and then chucked another 5 yards into the end zone, where Riggs snagged the leather, after interference set up the score.

Five Teams Enter Mason-Dixon Race

Five teams have signified their intentions of taking part in the annual Mason-Dixon cross-country 3-mile event at Gallaudet College here November 20. In addition to Gallaudet, defending champions Bridgewater, runner-up last year; Loyola, Catholic University and Johns Hopkins Army Unit, heavy favorite to annex this year's title.

Points will be scored on the first four of each team finishing. In addition to trophies to the winning and runner-up team, individual medals will be awarded to the first 15 finishers.

Card Grid Owner Ordered Seized in Gambling Probe

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Charles Bidwill, owner of the Chicago Cardinals' professional football team, was ordered seized and brought before the Cook County Grand Jury today by Chief Justice Benjamin P Epstein of the Criminal Court.

Bidwill, who operates a printing company and is a stockholder in the Hawthorne and Sportsman's Park race tracks, was questioned by the jury last Wednesday. He had been asked to return today, but Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley said that, instead, he sent a letter saying "On the advice of counsel I respectfully decline to be present."

Before the attachment order was issued, Crowley read to the judge a series of questions which had been put to Bidwill Wednesday. In the transcript he was represented as declining to answer a query as to whether he had dealings with a firm that permitted the firm to make "bet tickets." He was quoted as saying, "It might incriminate me." He also declined to answer questions about whether the Bidwill printing concern printed tickets, hard cards and wall sheets "for various bookies in Chicago and Cook County."

Naming (?) the Winners

Irish, Big Green, Ga. Tech Favored in Today's Games

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Our chief crystal gazer has been ill the past week with the flu and the following football selections are offered with some reservations:

Notre Dame over Northwestern—Frank Leahy, Notre Dame coach, says he discovered this summer during preparations for the Chicago All-Star game just how good Northwestern's Otto Graham is. He probably found out at the same time how to stop Mr. Graham. The contest is a sellout of 48,500.

Big Green Over Big Red

Dartmouth over Cornell—Figuring that Dartmouth's cripples will be cured by time of the kickoff and knowing that Bill Maceyko, late of Cornell, now is a member of the Sampson naval team. The game is being played at Boston where 20,000 are expected.

Georgia Tech over Tulane—The Georgia Engineers are the class of the Southeast Conference as long as Eddie Prokop romps behind that Tech line.

Ohio State over Illinois—Some 40,000 Ohioans will be on hand to cheer their freshmen to victory.

Texas A. & M. over Rice—Hardly more than a scrimmage for the Aggies on their way to the title game with Texas on November 25.

Texas over Texas Christian.—And the same goes here.

Pennsylvania over North Carolina—A spot for an upset but the Quakers should sneak through despite their mauling last week by Navy and the ailments acquired by Bob Odell.

Michigan over Wisconsin—Elroy Hirsch, star of the 1942 Wisconsin team, and numerous other former Badgers now compose the Michigan team and have nothing to fear from Wisconsin's 1943 freshmen.

Navy over Columbia—Despite Columbia's six straight defeats, some 20,000 will huddle in Baker Field to watch the Middies and the antics of their pet goat.

Twins Oppose Each Other

Yale over Princeton—Remember when this was one of the country's greatest? This year it draws attention only because neither has a defense and Yale End Walter Brown and Princeton Center Charles Brown are twin brothers. That's enough to lure 20,000.

Missouri over Oklahoma—Missouri plays its toughest rival on its home field and will retain the Big Six title for a third year.

California over UCLA—The Bears to repeat their 13 to 0 win

Recovery Prayer

Mass Said For Injured Gonzaga Boy

Tommy Dunigan, the 15-year-old youth who last night was clinging tenaciously to life at Providence Hospital after receiving a fractured neck and spinal injuries in football practice Tuesday, had the prayers of 600 fellow Gonzaga High School students, who attended a special mass for him yesterday, offered for his speedy recovery.

The injuries were incurred when Tommy tackled a fellow student who tried to break through the youth's end position on the Gonzaga Junior Varsity squad.

Last night Tommy's physician, Dr. C. J. Murphy, said that at one time since the accident the lad's temperature had risen to 109 degrees. He said it was almost unheard of for a person to live with such a temperature and it was a miracle that Tommy was still alive.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dunigan of 4616 Derussey Parkway, Chevy Chase could not be reached yesterday. They have maintained an almost constant vigil at the bedside since the accident happened as has a sister, Patricia, 21.

The Rev. Cornelius A. Herlihy, the grief-stricken athletic director at Gonzaga, also described Tommy's fight for life as a miracle and said that when the accident happened, both Tommy and Phil Daly, 15, of Bethesda, the youth that he collided with, were knocked out for 5 minutes.

Tommy was graduated from Blessed Sacrament Parochial School and was in his second year at Gonzaga. He was described as a leader in class activities and Coach Samuel (Bo) Richards praised the youth's athletic prowess and competitive spirit.

As a result of the accident a football game between Gonzaga and Eastern High schools, scheduled for yesterday morning, was postponed until today.

Company Football Set Today at GU

A football game between Company D and Company C in Georgetown University's ASTP League will be held today at 3:30 p. m. at Georgetown University Field. The contest is one of the regular weekly games in league play among Army Trainees.

Preceding the grid contest a novel 300-yard dash will be held in which entrants must race in full pack with rifle. Between halves, the finals of the 100 and half-mile events will be held, and following the contest, the mile relay championships will be contested.

Terps Battle Undefeated Commodores

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 12 (AP).—The undefeated and untied Bainbridge Naval Training Station football team went through a final light workout today prior to its contest tomorrow with the University of Maryland gridders at Tome Field before an anticipated crowd of 10,000.

Governor O'Conor and other civic and military notables are expected to witness the game. Between halves the physical instructors' school at Bainbridge will put on its weekly drill and pass in review before the Governor.

The sailors were given a decisive edge over the Maryland civilian crew in the pregame dope, although the Commodores expected to play without the services of several key players, including Lou Sossamon, regular center, and Charlie Justice and Jim Gatewood, two top-flight left halfbacks.

Navy Jayvees Rout Bainbridge, 20-0

Annapolis, Nov. 12 (AP).—Unfolding an effective aerial attack in the second quarter, Navy Jayvee football team today romped to 20-0 victory over the Bainbridge Naval Training Station Junior Varsity.

The Bainbridge Commodores, sporting a lineup of former college stars, showed a definite lack of coordination, though they managed to reach Navy's 10-yard stripe on two occasions through the efforts of a potentially good passing attack.

Bob Hardy of the Middies accounted for two Tar touchdowns when he completed scoring passes in the second and third periods.

Fast Finish By LaMotta Defeats Zivic

By Sid Feder

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—For five rounds tonight, Fritzie Zivic was on the way to giving old pop time and young Jake La Motta a sound whipping, but Jake had too much youth and weight for the stretch drive and came on to win a 10-round decision over the veteran Pittsburgher in Madison Square Garden. La Motta weighed 161; Zivic, 149½.

For half the bruising brawl, the aging crowd-pleaser with the flat nose—a 17 to 5 underdog tonight—piled up points and gave the Bronx youngster a solid going over with hard, sharp jabs and short right crosses for the entertainment of a partisan Garden gathering of 11,330. Then, La Motta's 11½-pound weight edge and the 13 years of fist-fighting in Fritzie's legs began to tell.

Zivic Finds Foe Everywhere

Young Jake swarmed all over him in the last five heats, swinging wildly by landing more than he missed and at the end he had a clear but close margin. But the crowd gave Fritz the cheers and the applause when he left the ring, loser in this "rubber" match between the two.

The Associated Press score-card gave La Motta six rounds and Zivic four. One of Fritz's was the ninth, which was taken away from the Bronx middleweight mauler for hitting low. The officials were split over the verdict, with Referee Eddie Joseph and Judge Marty Monroe voting for La Motta and Judge Jack Goodman casting his ballot for Fritzie, seven rounds to three.

Starting fast, Zivic had the crowd—that contributed to a gross gate of $30,242—on its feet and roaring as he stood off Jake's rushes, plastering him with sharp shots through the second, third and fifth, particularly in the early going. In the fourth, he skinned La Motta's left eye with a long jab, but Jake made up for this by doing the same to Fritzie's left optic in the seventh. Working on this wound to the finish, Jake had a small cut opened and showing traces of blood at the finish of the punch-party.

Platter Wins $10,000 Walden Stakes by Neck

Colt Scores In Brilliant Stretch Rush

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Nov. 12.—They gave the silver plate to Platter today—and he earned it. The son of Pilate and Lets Dine put on a brilliant stretch drive, engineered by little Conn McCreary, to win the thirty-seventh running of the $10,000 Added Walden Stakes by a neck margin in a thrill - producing blanket finish.

Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Royal Prince and E. K. Bryson's Director J. E. were staging a private battle for first money when along came Platter.

Carried Top Weight

Carrying top weight of 122 pounds Platter put the stamp of approval on himself as a 1944 Kentucky Derby hope with his brilliant effort. He was clocked in 1.48 3-5, ordinary time for the historic race won in the last three years by Count Fleet, Alsab and Whirlaway, but he was allowed to run his best only in the final eighth of a mile.

A non-winner when he arrived here two weeks ago, Platter appears to be capable of great things over a distance of ground. He added $10,800 to his earnings, won his second stake in a row here and now has $30,150 to his credit for the year. This was his last start of the year and he will now be primed for the Louisville classic.

Royal Prince, the Maryland-bred son of Dauber and winner of two local stakes, was not disgraced by the defeat. He lost ground at the first turn and had to run a sprinter, Director J. E., into defeat before giving way to Platter in the final jumps.

Director J. E. Goes Wide

Director J. E. went wide and into the lead at the first turn with Sweeping Time, Rodney Stone and Royal Prince close up. At this stage, McCreary was rating Platter along in seventh position.

Royal Prince, moved up gradually on Director J. E., after the other front runners faded. In the stretch, Platter came to the outside. At the eighth pole, Royal Prince began disposing of Director J. E. and then along came Platter. McCreary hand rode him and he went sailing by the others right at the wire.

Middies Face Lions Today In New York

Annapolis, Nov. 12 (AP).—Navy's pigskin battlers boarded the train for New York today to face the Columbia University Lions tomorrow at Baker Field.

The Tars held a long and rugged scrimmage last night in which Navy's mentor Capt. John E. Whelchel stressed the need for pass defense.

The Lions are expected to strike through the air immediately after the starting gun has sounded before an estimated 32,000 fans with the hope of taking the Middies off their guard and building up enough score to withstand the onrushing Tar ground attack.

Columbia, despite a season without victory so far, has a reputation for surprises and in its game with Dartmouth and Army showed extremely capable first-half strength—defensively as well as offensively.

The Middies will face Columbia without benefit of their cheering section since transportation hindrances prevented the Tar booters from attending the New York fray.

Middies Face a Hard Rock

Halfback Hal Hamberg, passer par excellence for the Middies, will be given the workhorse portion of the Tar attack, Navy coaches indicated, unless Navy manages to build up an early game lead.

Navy will be facing the man who almost sank the Middies when Columbia met the Tars last year in Baltimore Stadium. Team captain Tom Rock of the Lions blocked a punt in that game to score a safety for the Lions—two points which were closely followed by a Columbia touchdown to give them a 9-0 lead at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

It was not until the last few minutes of play of the 1942 fray that the Navy star of this season, Hemberg, tossed a desperation pass which was caught by Hillis Hume—another backfield ace of the 1943 Middie football squad.

After the Columbia game, Navy will have two weeks in which to practice for the fall classic—the Army-Navy gridiron struggle on November 27.

IT'S A WISE CHILD WHO KNOWS WHAT DAD WANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Manhattan White Shirts

Generations of Americans have given and received gifts by Manhattan. It's a deep-rooted custom that goes back to Civil War days. This custom is just as firmly imbedded in the minds of children as well as men who ask for Manhattan. Top-flight tailoring has made Manhattan Shirts the smartest fitting shirts that one can buy. Creative color skill has done magical things to Manhattan Ties. The sports-wear is styled with authority . . . sweaters, sport shirts, casual and all-weather jackets. The pajamas are full-tailored, made for a tired man's comfort. The hand-kerchiefs, too, have the Manhattan feel and look. Give a quality Christmas gift by Manhattan again this year. It's an old and thoughtful custom!

Pentagon Nightmare Lifts for New Worker

PENTAGON STORY

I shall never forget the first day I went to the Pentagon. Looking back on it now the experience doesn't seem real; it was more like a nightmare. I was bewildered and frightened; this 19-year-old, fresh from the cornfields of Iowa.

Honestly, I was so overwhelmed by the Pentagon that the building scared me like a bogeyman frightens a child. I had heard of the Pentagon, but it meant nothing at all to me and I presumed it was just another large place somewhat like the 10-story building I had visited in Des Moines.

But I thought I was seeing things on that early spring morning when I saw the Pentagon from the bus for the first time . . . the more I looked the larger the Pentagon seemed to be. Inside the building people were going in all directions, all in a hurry. All day long I encountered great lines of people, when I took lunch, to be interviewed, to fill out applications and the other torturing things a newcomer must go through.

That first day was enough for me and I decided to go back home. The first night was even worse. When I was able to sleep I dreamed of people rushing and pushing to get into buses and of the deadening clamp, clamp, clamp of people walking. Yes; I concluded the following morning, I was going home. The Pentagon, I thought, would make a nervous wreck out of me.

Then something happened. A girl who lived in the same house opened my door and told me to be ready in 10 minutes as we'd go to work together. And the girl smiled. I went with her and I've been going every day since. I love it, the Pentagon and the people who work in it, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that I'm doing a job that will help to win the war.

And now I have the satisfaction, too, of repaying my debt to society. One morning last week I was rushing like all the others to get to my desk at 8:15 when I was stopped by a bewildered look on the face of a little girl at the Pentagon bus stop. In her face I could see myself seven months ago. I was right. This girl was reporting for work and she was dazed by it all. It was such a joy to take her around and get her started off right in life at the Pentagon.

FRESH EGGS

I know a girl from Texas who was so homesick she could hardly stand it. But she isn't any more. Her mother is now sending her fresh eggs every week.

LIVE DEBATE

The question most debated between Army privates and Government girls is: Resolved, that our top sergeant is wuss'n yer landlady.

OSSIFICATION

Here's a swell Washington story as reported by Newsweek magazine:

An out-of-town newspaperman who applied for a job with the Office of Strategic Services is today a confused and miserable soul. The first thing that happened to him was to get an imperious wire at 4 o'clock one afternoon ordering him summarily to report that very day in Washington, hundreds of miles away.

Swelling with a sense of the urgency of his new duties, he streaked from his desk to his home and did some high-powered packing. His wife fluttered about him, tucking razor blades and tooth brushes into the crannies of his traveling bag. As the best he could do under the circumstances, the new employe stumbled breathless into the Pentagon at 2 a. m. The office was bleak and very nearly empty. He was informed that he might as well go to bed.

Next day, after an icy lecture on his tardiness, he found himself garbed in a captain's uniform sitting in a handsome private office behind a desk swept clear and clear in military fashion, but with no idea at all of what he was supposed to do.

An hour or so later he brightened when a girl appeared laden to the eyebrows with documents that she plumped down into the box marked "in." The captain asked politely what he was to do with them. "Put them," she murmured as she slipped through the doorway, "in the 'out' box."

For three days the captain labored to read the mornings pile so that by nightfall the "out" box would be filled. His only contact with the offices around him was the blithe young girl who tended his boxes. Nobody else so much as spoke to him.

On the fourth morning the captain, by then a shattered man, went directly to the colonel who was his boss. Told about the "in"and "out" boxes, the colonel only frowned at him and growled: "I don't want any of your newspaper humor. You may leave now."

The captain left. Three weeks later, thoroughly OSSified, he was still patiently playing the bewildering game of "in" and "out."

Two Reported Missing

The War Department disclosed yesterday the names of two Maryland soldiers missing in action.

They were:

Pvt. Oscar L. Palmer, son of Mrs. Annie Palmer of Elkton, missing in the Mediterranean area, and First Lieut. George R. Branzell, son of John W. Branzell of Laurel, missing in the Southwest Pacific area.

Dealer Cited As Violator Of ABC Law

One liquor retailer has been cited to appear before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to show cause why his license should not be revoked or suspended and others soon will be cited, Thomas Lodge, chief of the board, told reporters last night.

Although a Commissioner's ruling forbids announcement of the nature of the citation before the hearing, Lodge indicated that this was the first of several retailers to be cited for violations contributing to the local shortage. A public hearing will be held Monday at 9:30 a. m.

Lodge emphatically denied that a black market was the only cause of the local shortage. He said hoarding by individuals, saving of stock for Christmas sales when markups on specialties and wines would increase profits, and purchase by gangs entering stores one at a time to buy liquor to bootleg might also account for shortages.

Still adamant in his contention that wholesalers were not to blame for the shortage, Lodge admitted the ABC board was not equipped to check regularly wholesale records of delivery to retailers against retailers' records to receipts. Retail records for 700 licensed retailers must be inspected in the stores by a staff of only three inspectors, so only spot checking is possible.

He said a meeting of the liquor industry would be held Monday night at the Jewish Community Center, 8 p. m., at which Commissioner Guy Mason will speak.

Accused Forfeits $250 On Tie-in Sale Charge

In the first case of its kind here, E. F. McKannon, manager of the Gov. Shepherd Drug Co. of 2121 Virginia ave. nw. was allowed to forfeit $250 yesterday in Municipal Court on a charge of making a forced sale of wine with a whisky purchase.

Information was filed with the court by Creed Clark of 1123 C st. ne., who stated he went to the drug store on October 9 and when he asked for a bottle of whisky was told by McKannon that he would have to purchase a bottle of wine to get it. The tie-in sale is a violation of the Office of Price Administration regulations, officials said.

Klingle Road Bridge Bus Service to Begin Today

Klingle Road Bridge will reopen and Westmoreland crosstown buses will resume their regular route across it today, it was learned last night.

The bridge was closed the first of the month to let Capital Transit Company have reinforcements made to accommodate larger buses. The bridge also was widened a foot. Ten of the heavier 40-passenger buses will begin service on the route tomorrow, it was said.

Chides Owners

Walker Says Apartment Salvage Lags

Apartment owners and agents in Washington are a bottleneck in the salvage-collection program, Horace Walker, District salvage chief, charged last night.

They refuse to allow tenants to place tin cans or papers in front of the houses, and in many cases try to accuse the committee of not having collection facilities as an excuse for not participating, Walker declared.

Out of 350,000 pounds of paper collected last month, not 1000 pounds came from apartments, according to Walker. The city's 1800 apartment houses represent 71,000 living units as against 102,000 private dwellings, he said.

He mentioned two apartment houses as having been especially noncooperative.

Two-thirds of the people living in Washington are on war jobs and have little spare time, Walker pointed out. Tenants become hopelessly discouraged by the bottleneck which apartment house managements are causing collection agencies, even after individuals have taken time to prepare salvage material, Walker said.

He said trucks always are available to collect large amounts by calling salvage headquarters, Republic 8488. Regular paper collections are made monthly for small lots. Householders may place their tin cans by their garbage on regular garbage collection days. Tin cans are collected from apartment houses by volunteer bottling industry trucks the last Thursday of each month.

Whipping at Post For Wife-Deserter, Thief Advocated

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court advocated the whipping post as punishment for a man who left his crippled wife and child to run away with another woman and become a thief for her.

"The only thing to do with people of your type is to restore the whipping post," Justice McGuire said to James W. Smith, 23, 415 15th st. se., who was to be sentenced for larceny of $1089.

"I'd be glad to take it," replied Smith.

"Yes—now!" said the justice as he read the report of how Smith deserted his family.

Justice McGuire said Smith deserved to be sent to prison, but then his wife and child would become public charges. Smith was therefore given 18 months probation, and warned not to communicate with the other woman again.

Evelyn L. Willard, 22, of 1228 11th st. nw., charged with stealing $90 of the total loot, was given one year probation, with the warning that should she ever see Smith again she would go to jail immediately.

Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, speaking on behalf of and as one of the city fathers said, "We are glad to know that you are going to your first station under the city's banner."

William E. Leahy, District director of selective service, reviewed the military heritage of the recruits. He told the WACS they were going to help fight now to see that their younger sisters and daughters never would have to sit where they were sitting.

"All civilization is looking to young ladies like you and the boys you knew at home," he charged them, and added, "You are giving an example to many."

Japanese Help Community War Fund

War Fund's 10 Jap Americans Describe Joy of Freedom Here

Ten Japanese-American men and women are employes of the Community War Fund, it was revealed yesterday. They described the joy of freedom in Washington after a year's confinement in Western relocation centers.

All of them American born but with parents back in the camps, they told of rushing to stores here for flowers, veiled hats and other feminine frills. After wearing slacks for a year, they went on a buying spree evidenced yesterday by their colorful clothes and blossoms in their hair.

Most of them expect to work soon in Government agencies, they said at War Fund headquarters, 1101 M st. nw. Described by Fund officials as "excellent typists and clerical workers," several have passed Civil Service examinations and announced proudly their prospects for employment with the War Department, the War Manpower Commission and the War Relocation Authority.

Hazel Mizusaki, 20, a native of California, spoke with smiling eyes: "You really can't imagine how wonderful freedom is after a year in the barracks at the Jerome (Ark.) camp. The mess halls and the cooped-up feeling are just like Army life, I imagine. The movies they showed us out there were ancient. During my first week here I saw a movie every night."

Mrs. Toshiko Ota, 20, also a native of California, who was at Tulelake Camp for a year, found not only freedom but a husband in Washington. She was married here two weeks ago to a boy whom she met in the camp, now an employe of the War Relocation Authority.

Patrick Kobayashi, 24, another Community War Fund worker, said that he walked for miles when he first reached Washington, exhilarated by the idea that there were no boundaries for him as at Minidoka Relocation Center in Idaho. He visited historical points about which he had read in school books.

Workers Seek Last $600,000 In Fund Drive

An up-to-date audit will be completed today of contributions made during the past three days to the District of Columbia $4,800,000 quota of the Community War Fund, it was announced last night.

Meanwhile, Washington's 19,000 volunteer solicitors yesterday made efforts to bring in the $600,000 still needed to meet the goal.

Early filing of returns was urged by Herbert L. Willett, jr., executive director of the 1944 campaign, as he pleaded for oversubscription.

Persons not yet reached by a fund representative were asked to mail donations to headquarters at 1101 M st. nw.

In behalf of the fund, Therese Bonney, "Four Ace" war photographer and author of "Europe's Children," will come here to give an illustrated lecture in an appeal for United Nations War Relief, one of the three fronts supported by the campaign this year. To foreign relief agencies will go $546,500 of Washington's quota, approximately the amount still sought by solicitors.

Miss Bonney will tell a "Tale of Europe's Children" in the Hall of Flags, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. Sponsored by the United Nations Committee of the Community War Fund, the lecture will be free. Special invitations are being sent to clubs, embassies and representatives of French committees and delegations, both military and civil.

Pictures to be shown by Miss Bonney were taken on what she calls her "truth raids" from 1939 to 1943, covering war scenes in Spain, France, Belgium, Finland, Sweden and England, with emphasis on the suffering of small children.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, is chairman of the committee sponsoring the lecture. Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, is program chairman.

Temperature Falls To 32, With More Cold Due Tonight

Washington and its environs felt the coldest snap of the season yesterday when the temperature dropped to 32 degrees. And the Weather Bureau predicted that tonight the mercury would take another tumble and reach a low of about 28 or 30 early tomorrow morning.

The forecaster said that today would be cloudy and cool and as the mercury dropped in the evening it would be accompanied by strong winds. Yesterday's low was recorded at 7:55 a. m., the high, 50, at 4:10 p. m.

Man Convicted Again in Rape, Escapes Chair

James R. McKenzie, 24, Negro, once before sentenced to die, escaped the electric chair yesterday when a District Court jury found him guilty of robbery and rape, but declined to recommend the extreme penalty.

McKenzie became wide-eyed and shook for a moment when the all-male jury returned the verdict, but he became calmer when his attorney, Charles E. Ford, explained that while he faced a prison sentence of 45 years, for the first time in two years he was out of the shadow of the electric chair.

McKenzie was convicted in July, 1941, for the rape of the 26-year-old cleaning store employe, but his conviction and death sentence were set aside by the United States Court of Appeals, which found that the trial justice had failed to instruct the jury that they should acquit if they found insufficient evidence to convict.

Ford, one of the most prominent criminal attorneys in Washington, was then appointed defense attorney. Ford maintained that the ravished woman was mistaken in the identification of her assailant. She was unable to remember whether her assailant had a mustache, which McKenzie had. It was on this issue that the case revolved.

In one of the most sordid cases in District Court, testimony showed that the girl was robbed of her money and then forced to submit to her assailant at gunpoint.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire will impose sentence next week. Prosecution was by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius.

Thieves Get Gas Coupons at 2 Stations

Gasoline ration coupons totaling about 1680 gallons in value of gasoline were reported stolen from two Washington gas stations yesterday. Thieves entered the Gulf Service Station at 940 Florida ave. nw. by breaking a glass in the side window and stole coupons worth about 1405 gallons. A metal box containing coupons worth 275 gallons and a change carrier with over $11 in cash were taken from Lawler's Esso Station at New Jersey and Florida aves. nw.

Robert F. Harris, Negro, 24, of 62 P st. nw., was bitten on the left leg as he was walking in the front yard of 2514 Sheridan pl. se. by a dog owned by Fred Banks of the above address. Harris was treated at the Public Health Clinic.

While in the kitchen of a house at 616 4th st. nw., Daniel Hoskins, Negro, 55, of 130 Madison st. ne., stepped on the foot of a large bulldog. Hoskins was treated for a bite on the left ankle.

Meanwhile, a warning was issued last night by Dr. Ellicott to residents of Bradley blvd., near Bethesda, Md. to watch their pets for symptoms of the disease. It was just a few weeks ago that a rabid dog ran through that section and if the dog bit other animals, signs of rabies would begin to show now, he said. He urged residents to call police at once if their dogs act strangely.

Earlier in the day a police dog of John Edmonds, 502 Bradley blvd., taken to the University of Maryland by Montgomery County police yesterday, was found rabid.

Man Held in Rent Gouging Action

Life's Rejects

9 Children, Mental Cases, Committed

Yesterday was heartbreak day in District Court, as nine children were committed to the District Training School for the Feebleminded.

Among the cases was that of a gawky 9-year-old boy, a spastic, who whined throughout the proceeding, was consoled by his father. The boy took pencils out of his father's pocket and threw them at the psychiatrist. The child was ordered committed.

A 15-year-old girl was unable to care for herself. She has become infatuated with a 28-year-old man, and the doctor feared for her welfare, he told the court. The girl was committed.

13-Year-Old Venereal

A 13-year-old girl had contracted venereal disease. Her aunt said she was glad to contribute $15 a month for her support.

A 16-year-old Negro girl, about to become a mother, was there. The doctor said she has always managed to get enough money to feed herself, but she won't be able to take care of her child. Justice F. Dickinson Letts agreed that the girl should be sent away, and she sauntered out of the courtroom cockily.

Another case was that of a 5-year-old hydrocephalic who the doctor said will never learn to talk, and has no clear responses except for hunger and pain. The grandmother, a young woman, has taken care of the child since the mother died in childbirth and the father left home.

Youth Is Belligerent

A husky Negro youth, head hanging, was brought before the justice. He was belligerent, and hard to control, his mother and sister said. He too was committed.

"Where are they taking me?" shouted the husky youth as they took him out of the court.

The mother wailed and cried: "Oh, Lord, I gave my child away."

Charged Tenants $33 for $12 Place, Warrant States

By Hanson H. Hathaway

The first step in a determined effort to stamp out rental 'black marketing' in low-income rental groups, was taken yesterday by the District Rent Act Administration. Police arrested Charles M. Nash, General Accounting Office employee, on a warrant charging Rent Act violation.

According to Ernest F. Henry, general counsel for the Rent Administration, Nash for several months had exacted a $33 per month rent on a Snow Court premise on which the legal ceiling was $12.50 monthly.

Owner of several houses in the Snow Court area, between 25th and 26th and K sts., Nash placed two families, those of Gilbert Smith and Mamie Hill, in one of the houses, charging both families $16.50 each, according to Henry.

Searched Records

Henry searched records and found that as of January 1, 1941, the dwelling, comprising two stories with two rooms on each floor, was to be rented by rent law at a $12.50 maximum for the entire structure.

Following Nash's arrest Henry made a statement, saying:

"The Rent Act provision for protection against rent exploitation is available to all tenants in the District who have reason to believe they are paying more than legal rents.

"The law, as far as this office is concerned, will be applied no matter what the economic or social status of the persons involved."

Nash's arrest may be the forerunner of many others, according to Henry, whose office, under direction of the rent administrator, Robert Cogswell, is planning a detailed survey of all slum areas to unearth possible similar violations.

Wife Sought

The arrest of Nash followed allegations by the Washington Housing Association that slum-area tenants were being made victims of a go-between rental racket, in which regular real estate brokers rented properties to an agent of an operator who, in turn, crowded unsanitary slum dwellings with tenants to reap an excessive financial harvest in violation of law.

Nash will be arraigned Wednesday morning in Municipal Court.

A warrant has been issued for his wife, believed by Henry to be co-owner with her husband of the Snow Court holdings. Up to last night the warrant had not been served, Henry revealed.

Conviction on the charge of act violation is punishable by a fine of $1000 or a year in prison, or both.

Captain Harwood Of Coast Guard Honored by Navy

Capt. Charles William Harwood of the Coast Guard has been awarded the Legion of Merit for outstanding service while commanding a naval task group during the assault on Sicily, the Navy Department announced yesterday. The award was made by Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt, Commander of the US Naval Forces in Northwest African Waters, and was presented by Vice Admiral R. R. Waesche, Commandant of the Coast Guard.

HARWOOD

Captain Harwood commanded the task group which landed assault battalions directly on the beaches fronting Gela, Sicily. The citation said that "by his sound judgment in planning, thorough indoctrination of his forces, and by his cool and skillful leadership under fire the assault battalions were expeditiously landed and supported, thereby greatly contributing to the success of the invasion."

A commissioned officer for 20 years, Captain Harwood has spent most of his years of service aboard Coast Guard vessels, and during the past three years has held four commands at sea. He is at present Operations Planning Officer at Coast Guard Headquarters.

More Citizens Act Against Housing Plan

The Bradbury Heights Citizens Association last night added a resolution to the mounting objection to National Capital Housing Authority's plans to construct low-cost public housing projects in various sections of southeast Washington.

The resolution, opposing construction of any low-cost projects, "white or colored," in the undeveloped area between Benning and Ridge rds., north from the present developed section of Bradbury Heights, was endorsed by the Southeast Council of Citizens' Association immediately after its adoption by the Bradbury group.

Priorities Already Granted

Henry Austin, president of the Bradbury group, said he had learned from "reliable sources" that the NCHA had been granted priorities for construction of a low-cost project in a 25-acre area bounded by Woodlawn Cemetery, F st., Benning rd. and Alabama ave. se.

It was at this proposed site that the resolution was especially pointed.

NCHA last week abandoned plans to construct a unit along the south side of Alabama ave., between 13th and 15th sts. The decision followed heated protests.

Austin, who lives at 909 Ridge rd. se., was reelected president for the seventh consecutive year, following the business session in the Bradbury Heights Church. Frank Randolph, 4135 Alabama ave. se., was reelected first vice president. Robert Butturrff, 1104 44th pl. se., was elected second vice president, and Charles Cabot, 1111 46th st. se., third vice president.

Meeting also last night was the Southeast Council of Citizens Association, which authorized a subcommittee investigating housing and slum areas in Washington to go on a tour of slum areas in the Southeast. The tour would, be conducted by members of the association.

Removal of Spots and Stains Explained in Simple Rules

Complaining about laundry and dry cleaning problems? Here's how you can ease the situation: Equip yourself with the three basic items necessary for removing spots and stains, and follow a few simple instructions. Mark it down in your budget as money saved.

In General—

Treat the stain quickly but carefully, while it's fresh.

Treat it according to the type of stain and the fabric.

Don't use hot water on any stain. Heat or water may set the stain.

Working Tools—

How to Use—

1. Absorbent powder — (for fresh grease, salad oil, or ink spots): Lay the stained article on a table and spread a layer of absorbent over the stain. When it becomes gummy, brush it off. Repeat this until the stain disappears.

If the stain is a solid fat, it must be melted. Spread the absorbent on the stain between white blotting paper and apply a warm iron.

2. Bleaches—Sodium perborate: For small fresh stains mix four tablespoons of sodium perborate to one pint of lukewarm water and sponge. For a large stain soak the garment in a solution of perborate as above, with one pint of soapy water. Rinse.

Hydrogen peroxide: Apply to the stain with a medicine dropper or sponge the stain. Rinse.

3. Solvents—Carbon tetrachloride: If it's a grease stain, sponge with carbon tetrachloride or dip the stain into the liquid.

The correct procedure for sponging a grease spot is to lay the stained material, wrong side up, on a soft cloth. Sponge the remover to the back of the stain, using a soft cloth. Work from the outside of the spot to the center. Apply quickly.

Key Women of League To Meet Next Week

By Genevieve Reynolds

In an effort to help stiffen the backbone of the American people to meet intelligently the postwar crisis, the board of directors of the National League of Women Voters will hold a week's session in Washington beginning Monday, November 15.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Ordinarily, the league completes its program mapping in five days. But because it believes that a crisis on our country's part in fashioning the world after the war is fast approaching, a sixth day has been added to this session, according to Miss Marguerite M. Wells, league president.

"While the Senate struggles," Miss Wells said, "to stiffen its members to meet the postwar crisis, the League of Women Voters has undertaken to help stiffen the people. Sixty thousand men and women under league leadership have set out to reach millions of citizens individually, person to person, not to propagandize but to help them lay aside doubts and fear so as to fortify them for the time when the fateful choice must be made. The will to find a way to collaborate, whatever the difficulties and doubts, will determine the choice people make."

Cooperating with the National League, the District of Columbia League launched an intensive campaign during the summer to set the people thinking on the necessity of postwar collaboration. You might recall that they talked to the ice man, milk man, maid, butlers, store keepers, clerks, lawyers, doctors, in fact, those in all walks of life. On streetcars, in buses, railroad stations, wherever there were people, energetic league members engaged them in conversation, be it friend or stranger.

Among those attending the national board meeting, in addition to Miss Wells, are Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, first vice president, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Richard Field, Weston, Mass., second vice president; Mrs. R. T. H. Halsey, New Haven, Conn., secretary; Mrs. Walter T. Fisher, Winnetka, Ill., treasurer; Miss Ruth H. Mitchell, St. Cloud, Minn.; Mrs. D. Bailey Calvin, Galveston, Tex.; Mrs. Marion A. Cheek, Snyder, N. Y.; Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. J. Hardin Smith, Kirkwood, Mo.; Mrs. James A. Starr, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. Leonard A. Smith, Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. Harold D. Dyke, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, Webster Groves, Mo., and Mrs. J. S. Schramm, Burlington, Iowa.

Alliance Francaise

Come Monday, the Alliance Francaise of Washington will open its 41st season with a tea, 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., at the Sulgrave Club.

Formed in 1902, the Washington group, is a member of the Federation of the Alliances Francaise in the United States and Canada. Nonpolitical in character, it is devoted solely to the dissemination of French culture. To that end, each year it brings eminent French men of letters and artists to speak to the members. This season will be no exception, when it comes to interesting French speakers. Among those scheduled to appear on the program are: Roger Pickard, jurist, economist and historian; Henri de Kerillis, journalist; Andre Morize, professor at Harvard University; Henri Peyre, historian, and Jean Sebec, writer. By the way, the Alliance Francaise headquarters here is at 2700 Q st. nw.

Lynch Luquer is president of the Washington group. Vice presidents are Dr. N. H. Darton and Commander A. Macomb. Mme. Blanche Bimot, one of the moving spirits of the organization since its inception, is secretary and treasurer, while Mrs. W. T. Brantley is honorary secretary.

French students in the colleges and universities form the Junior Alliance. They are given the opportunity to hear the great lecturers in French.

If You Own an Orange, Here's How to Treat It—

Don't squeeze: squeezing the oranges and straining the juice wastes from 35 to 50 per cent of the food value. One large orange furnishes 1200 units of vitamin C and one-half glass of the juice only 600 units. If you prepare the juice the night before and do not keep it in an air-tight container in the refrigerator, it loses even more of its value. You would save trouble and the vitamins to serve whole oranges for breakfast and let the family peel their own.—J. J. KAIN.

The U. S. Marines and "French Night" took over the Stage Door Canteen one evening recently, and among those on whom the spotlight was turned repeatedly during the program were the four above—Germaine Aussey, who in private life is Mrs. John Ringling North; Gen. Paul Etienne Beynet, head of the French Military Mission; Mme. Claude Alphand, noted singer, and Corpl. Allan Foster of the Fourth Army Service Band

Colorful Events Accent Calendar at Canteen

Anniversary Celebrations and Tributes to United Nations Add Glitter to Weekly Round

By Jean Craighead

The Stage Door Canteen has anniversary fever. It is an uneventful night there if some historic American date tied in with the cultural festivities of one or more of the United Nations is not being celebrated. One night this week they rolled two parties into one evening and paid tribute not only to the Marines' birthday but also to the memories of La Belle France.

The Marines took over first, celebrating the 168 years of their service in war and peace, from their inauguration at Tun Tavern, Philadelphia, during the American Revolution to their world-wide battles in the second World War.

Sergt. William Becker of the Marine Corps, a veteran of 26 years, cut the big birthday cake the Canteen gave to the Leathernecks, and dished out the slices to the Marines, the soldiers and sailors, hostesses, singers, musicians, waiters and anybody else who wanted a handout from a sergeant.

The baroque Belasco Theater, where the Washington canteen is located, buckled with the excitement of it all. The Marines soon had the situation well in hand. They spun the hostesses like colored tops to the boogie woogie jive of the Fort Washington Dance Band.

The evening party was transcribed overseas to the fighting fronts, and at a word from the master of ceremonies when the far-flung battlefields tuned in, the men whistled and cheered in enthusiasm.

The Fighting French picked up their cue was a program that was as vivacious and entertaining as the treasured memories of their nation. "Songs and Tales from Old Brittany" recalled all that is festive in the French, and was received with wild shouts from the audience.

Gen. Paul Etienne Beynet, new chief of the French Military Mission, headed the list of distinguished persons whose presence added glitter to the scene.

The noted French singer, Mme. Claude Alphand, entertained with old and new French folksongs, and Mme. Germaine Aussey, who in private life is Mrs. John Ringling North, joined the selected chorus.

Concluding the birthday party and festival was dance music by the Fourth Army Service Forces Band, which brought out the American in the program again. The dancers swung out and dug into the floor with a hep step, while onlookers swayed in their chairs and whispered madly as the performers shone in the best Lindy fashion.

New Windows At St. Paul's Depict History

Four new memorial windows will be dedicated at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, Rock Creek Church road and Webster st. nw., at 11 a. m. tomorrow by the Right Rev. George W. Davenport, D. D., retired Bishop of Easton, Md. He will also preach the sermon.

These windows, in memory of Conrad Becker, Olivia Mary Deakins Becker, the Rev. James Albert Buck, Louisa M. Serpell Deakins, William Francis Deakins and Emma Victoria Smeltzer, follow the theme set forth in the windows now in the chancel which trace the history of the Eucharist from the opening pages of the Bible to the first service conducted by the Rev. Robert Hunt at Jamestown, Va.

The new windows in the nave tell the history of the Episcopal Church in America from 1579, when Sir Frances Drake held the first service of the Church in California, to the consecration of the Right Rev. Samuel Seabury of Connect cut in 1784. Bishop Seabury was the first Bishop of the Episcopal Church in America.

The new series culminates in the Tower Window which symbolizes "Christ the King" and the words "Go ye into all the world;" the final message to Christians leaving the church.

These windows were designed and created by Wilbur Herbert Burnham of Boston, Mass., whose work may be found in many of the great churches in this country, and tomorrow at 8 o'clock in the church, Mr. Burnham will give an illustrated lecture on "Stained Glass, Mediaeval and Modern.'"

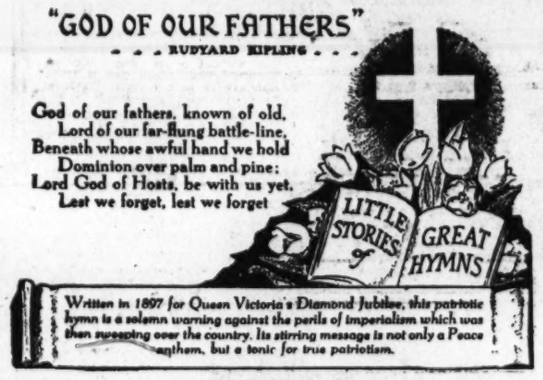
"GOD OF OUR FATHERS"
- - - RUDYARD KIPLING - - -

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine:
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget



Written in 1897 for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, this patriotic hymn is a solemn warning against the perils of imperialism which was then sweeping over the country. Its stirring message is not only a Peace anthem, but a tonic for true patriotism.

BAHA'U'LLAH says: "As our knowledge of things, even or created and limited things, is knowledge of their QUALITIES and NOT of their ESSENCE, HOW IS IT POSSIBLE TO COMPREHEND THE ESSENCE OF THE DIVINE REALITY, WHICH IS UNLIMITED? For the SUBSTANCE of the ESSENCE of ANYTHING is not comprehended, but only ITS QUALITIES. For example, the existence of the sun is unknown, but is UNDERSTOOD by its QUALITIES, which are HEAT and LIGHT. The knowledge of the REALITY of the DIVINITY is IMPOSSIBLE and UNATTAINABLE, but the KNOWLEDGE of the MANIFESTATIONS of GOD is the KNOWLEDGE of GOD, for the BOUNTIES, SPLENDORS and DIVINE ATTRIBUTES are APPARENT in them."

Post Church Editor

A statement of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America proposing a limited program of relief for the starving peoples of occupied Europe was presented at the current hearings on the Gillette-Taft resolution by Dr. Roswell P. Barnes, associate general secretary of the Federal Council. He also submitted a similar statement by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The hearings are being conducted by the subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Dr. Barnes told the members of the committee that "the churches supported the intent and purpose" of the Gillettee-Taft resolution, which favors a limited experimental program of feeding the children in occupied countries of Europe.

The council's statement proposed an extension to other occupied countries of the relief program already functioning in Greece with the approval of the Allied governments.

The plan involves the purchase of supplies in countries where there is an excess of certain foods, their transport in neutral ships to neutral ports, trans-shipment in sealed cars to the areas of want, and direct distribution under the supervision of the Red Cross to those in most desperate need.

In answer to questions by members of the committee, Dr. Barnes declared that there was considerable support in England for this plan and that British church leaders had frequently expressed the opinion that there was less active promotion of the plan in the United States than in Great Britain.

Many prominent Washington clergy will carry the message of the Christian Mission on World Order into high schools and colleges and universities between now and Christmas, according to Federation of Churches' officials.

A number of speakers appeared before local and nearby high schools this week, and others will address assemblies this week.

Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will speak before the Western High School assembly Tuesday morning; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, before the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School and the Rockville Lions Club Wednesday, and Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, at Coolidge High School, Thursday.

The mission's project in the schools has been indorsed by Drs. Chester W. Holmes and G. C. Wilkinson, both assistant superintendents of schools.

Speaking of schools, we could not help noticing the large representation from Albright Memorial Evangelical Church at the Armistice Night grid game between Coolidge and Roosevelt High Schools. The school is just a half block away from the church at 4th and Rittenhouse sts. nw., and members of the football squad are well represented on the church and Sunday school roster.

Rev. Walter G. Borchers Quits Post Here to Enter Business

The Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., who was "born," he said, into the Christian ministry, has resigned as assistant pastor of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., to enter business, effective next January 1.

BORCHERS

In presenting his resignation at a congregational meeting Thursday night, Mr. Borchers said that leaving the ministry was "in keeping with a long-considered desire." In an interview last night, he said he had done "much praying" over the matter.

He said that his missionary parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Walter G. Borchers of Brazil took him to London, England, when he was 2 years old and placed him in the pulpit of City Road Chapel, John Wesley's old church and consecrated him to the ministry.

Mr. Borchers was born in Rio de Janeiro, and grew up in Santos, the coffee-exporting center, and Minas, the educational center. He preached his first sermon when 14.

His parents sent him to America, where he was educated at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., and Candler School of Divinity, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

He served at First Church from 1937 to 1940, spent a year as pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, Omaha, Nebr., returning to Washington in February, 1942, to become Federation of Churches' administrative assistant. He returned to First Church as assistant pastor January 1, 1943.

He will become conected with the Reliance Insurance Co's. local offices, of which Walter H. Britt, a layman of First Church, is district manager.

Gen. Hines to Talk

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the Veterans' Bureau, will deliver his annual Armistice Day address tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 18th and Church sts. nw. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 and 9:30 a. m.

Lads in Uniform Swing To October Pin-Up Gals

WITH "WAR PICTURES" coming to the fore again, the lads in the service camps evidently are loading up with escapist entertainment while the going is gay . . . Latest bulletin from the United States Army Motion Picture Service lists the box-office champions for October in the War Department Theater as "Sahara," "Girl Crazy," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" (Betty Grable), "Princess O'Rourke" (Olivia De Havilland), and "A Lady Takes a Chance" (Jean Arthur) . . . The score: 4 to 1 for fun.

JEAN ARTHUR

. . . Two of these "champs"—"Rosie" and "Princess"—are currently visible on downtown screens . . . The other three will be discoverable around the neighborhoods, now or a little later . . . With the Republic south of the border becoming a more and more popular vacation spot for gilded citizens of these more or less United States, the Trans-Lux Theater is taking advantage of the situation by presenting "Glimpses of Mexico," a FitzPatrick Traveltalk in color, as one of the featured short subjects on its new bill . . . When Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of Lillian Hellman's "The North Star" flashes onto the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, come Thursday, many will be wondering who Farley Granger, cast in the role of Damian, opposite Anne Baxter, may be . . . He not only may be, but is, the only youngster we know of who ever secured a top assignment in an important film by answering a newspaper want ad . . . Driven to desperation, or nearby, by his futile quest for the right kid for the part, Goldwyn inserted this ad in the Help Wanted—Male classification of the Los Angeles press: "BOY, over 17, but not 18; theatrical experience desirable but not essential. Send photo and brief biography" . . . Farley did, secured an interview, made a screen test, and there he is . . . Was born in San Jose on July 1, 1925, of pioneer California stock.

Sees All, Tells All

"From the Gay Nineties to 1944" is the way the Advertising Club of Washington is summarizing the star attraction of its luncheon meeting scheduled for next Wednesday in the Washington Hotel at 12:30 sharp. . . . This effulgent star of the occasion will be Col. Jimmy Lake, of the flamboyant forensics, who will address the assembled multitude on "Past—Present—Post-War Burlesque" . . . The club's tantalizingly illuminated brochure describes Col. James Jeremiah as "Washington's colorful maestro, entrepreneur and What It Takes in the production, advertising and selling of that famous American product, Burlesque" . . . As elegant a specimen of understatement as we have come across in I don't know when . . . After all the backing and filling and off-again-on again business of the past few weeks, that "Cavalcade of Negro Music" finally is coming off at Uline's Arena Monday night, November 15, the date to which it was postponed from October 6 at Griffith Stadium . . . Under the personal aegis of Promoter Fred A. Kirsch, the program now will consist of the Four Ink Spots, the Art Tatum Trio, the Silver Echo Quartet, Erskine Butterfield, Ethyl Wise and Cootie Williams and His Orchestra for dancing until 2 a. m. . . . The Howard Civic Association's Nursery Fund still will share in the proceeds of the tickets the Association sells . . . My thanks to T/S Max M. Feldman, U. S. Army, for his thoughtfulness in making possible an opportunity to see "Guadalcanal Diary," in case I missed the train to Philadelphia last Wednesday—which I almost did.

"Double Or Nothing"

The first play to be presented in New York's new Civic Theater, the City Center (formerly Mecca Temple on West 55th. Street), will be Sidney Kingsley's prize-winning drama, "The Patriots" . . . One week only, during the Christmas "lay-off week," December 20-25, inclusive . . . When it comes to Washington as one of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription plays, we'll be getting it for two weeks—which it richly deserves on any man's stage . . . "The Patriots" is the only full-dimensioned play ever presented at the Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress . . . At the time of the dedication of the Jefferson Memorial, that was . . . Billboard, the amusement weekly that runs almost neck-and-neck with Variety in the profession, has cracked up a 50-year-old precedent by abandoning its annual Anniversary and Holiday Greetings Number this year . . . "This year," they urge their advertisers, "don't buy an anniversary and holiday greeting ad; buy an extra war bond" . . . Nice gesture that should please Mr. Morgenthau practically out of his skin . . . Irving Berlin has gone and done it again. . . . His new song, "My British Buddy," added to "This Is the Army" for British consumption during its hit engagement in London, is reported the biggest "smash" in the show . . . When Eva Le Gallienne, costar with Joseph Schildkraut in "Uncle Harry," opening Monday night in the National for two weeks, first became an actress-manager through her production of Ibsen's "Master Builder," her assistant stage manager was a young man who since has done fairly well for himself, what with the movies and all . . . His name is Mischa Auer.

Some months ago a book called "Hope for Humanity" was published by the Victory Publishing Co. Its author was J. Howard Ralbag, Ph.D. The author financed its publication. The publisher now is in the Army . . . Routine notices of its publication appeared in the local press. And when there was no response, the author withdrew the book . . . The first polemic in the book is called "An Answer to H. L. Mencken." Last week the first and only order for a copy finally came to the Victory Publishing Co. from a Philadelphia book shop. The copy was ordered sent directly to the purchaser in Baltimore—the over-curious H. L. Mencken.

The musical accompaniment will be by the most famous living composer of another ally—Russia's Shostakhovich.

Tuesday Sam Boston, the noted betting commissioner, was convicted in Special Sessions, where he had been accused of maintaining a room for gambling and betting on fights. The principal evidence against Boston came from the policemen who tapped his phones . . . One of them reported that before the Pep-Stoltz fight at the Garden, a man telephoned Boston, and informed him : "Pep's father just made a bet on Pep." . . . "That proves nothing," Boston replied. Stoltz's mother just made a bet on Stoltz."

Leonard Pennario, the 19-year-old pianist now with the ground crew at the twenty-first Ferrying Group Air Transport Command, is being granted a leave, to play with the Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall next week . . . Harry Ross and the Reiss Brothers, back from Loew's New Guinea, are now at Loew's State.

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 12.—Rita Hayworth joins Orson Welles in New York for three weeks before Orson takes off for England to do "War and Peace." Before starting the picture, however, he may run over to Russia and sign up Dimitri Shostakovich to compose special music for the Tolstoy epic. He's just the kind of a guy who'll get away with it, too . . .

RITA HAYWORTH

A picture about the Chautauqua circuit should be interesting, now that Gary Grant has agreed to play in "Gone Are the Days." Rita Hayworth, Janet Blair, Charles Coburn, and Ann Miller will assist. Too bad they can't get Marjorie Main. That's where she started, never dreaming she'd ever reach our village. Marjorie gathers Chautauqua members about her once a month for a pow-wow of the old days.

Put One Over

Edith Kellogg, Frank Orsatti's secretary, is laughing fit to kill. Her husband, Bruce, has signed a Metro contract, and her boss, Orsatti, the fair-haired boy over there, didn't even know he was being considered . . . Mary Boland goes into the new play "Don't Mention It," which opens in Seattle, then San Francisco, and New York. . . . "The Sullivans" needed an admiral for a speech at the launching of the ship. They couldn't get Rear Admiral Clark Woodward, but he gave his consent to an impersonation. So John Nesbit of radio's "Passing Parade," who's been trying to get into the Navy for a year, goes in on the screen as an admiral. He was chosen because Lloyd Bacon remembered hearing his radio salute to the Sullivans after the boys' deaths.

As Others See Him

Gene Buck and wife visited their son, Gene, jr., a cadet pilot in Alabama, and wrote as follows: "We hadn't seen him in five months. You can imagine the kick we got out of being with the guy. Like his kid brother, Buddy, who also is out to be a pilot, he's nuts about the Air Corps. You have to hand it to these kids. They're the most strictly disciplined lads in this man's army, physically and mentally; they throw the books at 'em, and they all seem to love it. Of course, thousands are washed out in the process as they go through the necessary steps, but I never saw such spirit, guts, and concentration. No wonder we have a miracle Army and Navy. It staggers the imagination to feel and see the transformation in men and machines from sports coats and overalls to tan and blue, from station wagons to planes, tanks and ships, from swing records to bugle calls, and above all, from learning how to live to learning how to kill." Beautifully put, Gene.

They're Off

Darryl Zanuck's "Life of Woodrow Wilson" starts shooting November 15 with only 15 per cent of the cast set. It will take eight months to shoot. There are 167 important roles and already 400 tests have been made. When you're remaking history, the headache begins. . . . After seeing Cass Daley in "Ridin' High," I feel she deserves better parts. That is a screamingly funny woman.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(Drew Pearson today awards the brass ring and a free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round to "the most hated man in Washington"—Judge Fred M. Vinson.)

WHEN FRED M. VINSON stepped down from the United States Court of Appeals to become Director of Economic Stabilization, a lot of people heaved a big sigh of relief and figured that the tough, price-fixing days of bulldozing Leon Henderson were gone forever.

Judge Vinson, they thought, was an easy-going, soft-spoken Kentucky former Congressman who liked to tell darky stories, relished a mint julep and would rather watch a horse race than fix prices.

But they were sadly mistaken. Judge Vinson does like mint juleps. He also enjoys horse races and good stories. But all this and more have been swept aside in his passionate campaign to stop inflation.

In short, Judge Vinson has developed into another Leon Henderson—but with political savvy.

He has rowed with the farmers, he has earned the undying enmity of railroad labor, he has fought the big oil companies, he has the cattlemen swearing vengeance against him, he has stamped on the toes of John L. Lewis, he has even taken on old Curmudgeon Harold Ickes.

Vinson vs. Ickes

Once, after Vinson had stuck a large and unyielding fist in front of Ickes' drive for higher oil prices, the Secretary of the Inferior wrote Judge Vinson a typical Ickes letter. Next day at Cabinet meeting the two men met.

"Harold," said Judge Vinson, beating him to the punch, "I certainly want to thank you for that sweet letter you wrote me. Some people might have thought it sharp, but I know what you could have written if you had really set your mind to it."

Even Ickes had to laugh. In this particular fight, Vinson was bucking the big oil companies and the entire oil industry. In another fight, however, he was bucking the coal miners and took just as adamant a stand against John L. Lewis.

While he was conferring with Coal Administrator Newton, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the latter remarked that there were some serious questions to be considered on the side of the miners.

"There's only one question for me," shot back Vinson, "whether we've got one flag or two in this country."

The most hated man in the USA as far as railroad labor is concerned is Fred Vinson. Some rail workers actually think that Vinson must have been paid by the railroad executives to block their demand for a wage increase.

Born in Mountains

WHAT THEY DON'T realize is that Vinson has been just as adamant in blocking big business and everyone else who wants to up prices. Also they don't realize that Vinson, born in the mountains of Kentucky, has spent his life battling for the underdog.

LOUISA, Judge Vinson's birthplace, is up in the Kentucky mountains where some people still carry guns, and where some of the judge's friends, in all seriousness, have promised to bring their Winchesters to Washington if he gets in trouble.

At Central College, Kentucky, Vinson was a star baseball player, received several big league offers, turned them down to study law, and enter Congress. He became a Congressman at 33, soon became a leading tax legislator and is the man largely responsible for increasing taxes in the higher brackets, and easing them in the lower.

Though it hasn't been featured in the papers, Vinson is hated by the big cattle ranchers even more than by railroad men. For months they tried to prevent his putting a ceiling on the price of beef. In this, his old friends, War Food Administrator Judge Marvin Jones, Congressman Dick Kleberg, world's largest rancher, and Assistant Agricultural Secretary Grover Hill—all from Texas—lined up against him.

Joe Montagu, of the Southwest cattle lobby, said to Vinson: "What difference does it make if meat goes up 10 per cent? It only means a few cents a month to each family."

Bankers Weep

Much as the rail men hate Vinson, they probably would have changed their minds had they sat incognito at a meeting of the Investment Bankers Association of America. It was supposed to be a happy occasion. But Vinson, called upon to speak, made it most unhappy. The bankers virtually wept. He said:

"Americans, in this second year of total war, are spending astronomical sums on food, drink, jewelry, furs and ways to make merry. Expenditures in theaters, cabarets, concerts and other amusement this year rose 30 per cent."

Pointing out that the American people must tax themselves, must prevent inflation through taxation, Vinson continued:

"Some day our boys will come home. I pity the sunshine patriot who when called before them must say: 'I took the bread from the mouths of your wife and children while you fought for me.'"

After his speech, one cynical banker told Vinson: "I'll bet Charley Michelson wrote that speech for you."

But it wasn't meant as a campaign speech. Vinson feels what he says, lives it, practices it. And though he may be hated by bankers, cattlemen, oil men, railroad labor and John L. Lewis, it will take the President of the United States himself to overrule Fred Vinson when it comes to pulling out the inflation plug by even the tiniest bit.

Postwar America Is Film Subject

First of an anticipated film cycle on postwar America is announced by MGM, who will produce "This Is Tomorrow," a John Nesbitt Passing Parade subject.

The model community of the future with its architectural innovations and latest scientific developments will be presented. According to extensive research, indications point to the elimination of homes in congested factory areas due to modernized transportation conveniences. All in all a streamlined Utopia is the new pattern and within the confines of the average pocketbook.

Shorts executive Jerry Bresler has given the producer and associate producer assignments to Endre Bohem and Herbert Moulton, respectively.

Capital Store Sales Up 11% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended November 6 were 11 per cent heavier than in the same 1942 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

For the four weeks ended November, sales of the seven reporting local stores were 7 per cent heavier than in the corresponding period last year.

Retail sales in the Fifth Reserve District showed a gain of 6 per cent for the week and 7 per cent for the four-week period.

Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its weekly trade review reported yesterday the first flurries of Christmas shopping. Sales were high in all lines during the week, the mereantile reporting agency said, despite bad weather in some sections.

Apparel continued to account for a large share of retail volume and demand for housefurnishings was strong although scarcities limited sales. On average, dollar volume ran 7 to 9 per cent ahead of 1942. By regions percentage gains in sales were, East, 2 to 4; Middle West, 7 to 10; South, 14 to 17; Southwest, 16 to 19.

Wholesale volume was found equal to that of the previous week, supported by substantial ordering of spring lines and reordering of winter and gift merchandise.

Alien Property Owners Warned

Americans who own foreign property are required to file reports describing their holdings with the Treasury Department before December 1, it was announced yesterday. Officials said that 43,000 posters reminding property holders of the deadline have been mailed for display in all postoffice lobbies.

Treasury officials said this information was needed for immediate use by occupational and military authorities and by agencies which are waging economic warfare. Owners of foreign bonds payable in American money, or any other kind of foreign property, with a value of $10,000 or more, are told they can secure the necessary report forms from their banker, their nearest Federal Reserve Bank or from the Foreign Funds Control, Treasury Department.
